MRS. FURFEY IS GIVEN HER LIBERTY AND CASH BY WEALTHY HUB MAN

Ellsworth, Me., April 29.—The divorce suit of Mrs. Edith Griffith Furfey against Dr. J. Austin Furfey was taken from the jury today and it was announced that the Boston and Bar Harbor dentist would not contest the case further.

A conference of principals, counsel and Judge Burpee took place after the jury had been dismissed. It was then announced that Judge Burpee would grant as absolute divorce on the ground of cruel and abusive treatment.

On good authority it was learned that Dr. Furfey agreed to settle sum of $27,700 on his wife.

DON'T CHEW TOBACCO LATEST EDICT BY FORD

Detroit, April 29.—Henry Ford, automobile magnate and firm foe of the cigarette, is continuing his onslaught on other forms of tobacco as well, it was learned today with the announcement that notices prohibiting the use of chewing tobacco have been posted at the River Rouge and Highland Park plants of the Ford Motor Company.

This order affects more than 100,000 workmen in various production departments and is issued in the interest of sanitation and the promotion of healthier working conditions, according to company officials.

It will be extended to branch and assembly plants throughout the country immediately, so that enforcement of this order will have a widespread effect upon sale of chewing tobacco. It is estimated that a loss in chewing tobacco sales of from $1,000 to $10,000 daily is entailed by the order in this section alone. Mr. Ford's primary interest in eliminating use of chewing tobacco is said to be in the maintenance of spotlessly clean plants.

At the Cambridge Ford plant this afternoon it was said that the new chewing order had not been received there. "It may come through later today or tomorrow in a general letter," it was stated. "The newspapers generally get the jump on us on all important orders from the Detroit office."

THE Los Angeles Herald yesterday published the biggest week-day edition of a newspaper ever seen in Los Angeles. That tells in part the story of Los Angeles progress. Newspapers reflect their cities.

MERCHANTS everywhere are advised to get copies of Colonel May's advertising in yesterday's Los Angeles Herald. This writer counted twelve pages of May advertising in that one edition, and perhaps missed a few advertisements.

Colonel May and his son, Tom, may believe that the way to get attention is to COMMAND ATTENTION.

NEWSPAPER publishers should get copies of yesterday's Los Angeles Herald from the publisher, Dr. Frank Barham, for use among advertisers. It is important for merchants to understand that the way to get business is to go after it, and let people know what they have to offer.

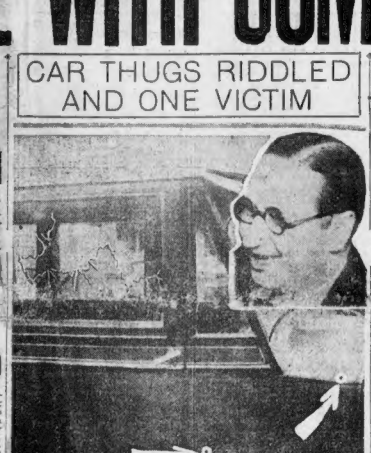
CAR THUGS RIDDLED AND ONE VICTIM



BELIEVE HUNTED 'COP SLAYERS' HAVE ELUDED POLICE AT MEDFIELD

Eluding the swarms of heavily armed police who have been on their trail for days, Albert Deshon and Robert Samburski, sought in connection with the slaying of Patrolman Frank J. Comeau, were today reported to have been seen in Medfield.

The boys, whose description tallied with those of the youths wanted, were with two girls of the dapper type on the woods road in the northern section of Medfield.

Harry H. Leonard, a salesman of North Andover, told Chief Hogan of (the Medfield) police he was driving his car on the road through the woods when he spied the quartet.

He described the boys in detail and said one of them was talking very earnestly, while both appeared nervous. Leonard said he stopped his car to watch, but the four disappeared into the woods.

State troopers on motor cycles, who had arrived shortly before Leonard told his story, were despatched to the district in question by Sergt. Carl L. Culhane in command. Others were ordered to patrol the roads in Medfield, with particular attention to the northern section. The troopers were sent to report to Chief Hogan by Lieutenant Harold

BOSTON IS PROMISED SOME WARM WEATHER

Whether temporary or permanent, a wave of warmth is due hereabouts tomorrow, according to the weather bureau, and, strange as it may seem, there was not the sign of a storm in sight when the weather man scanned his map today.

Through the night, cold weather gradually disappeared from the chilly corners of New England and a warm sun is shining today.

BOYS CONFESS AND REVEAL ROBBERIES

Breaking down under a grilling by police, three boys, arrested at gun point while attempting to break into a drug store in East Boston today, gave information that led to the discovery of another break and the arrests of two more youths.

All five were held in $2,500 bail each on charges of breaking and entering and larceny in the night time.

The trio arrested at the druggists of William D. MacPherson, No. 194 Lexington street, East Boston, are booked as Louis Alfred, sixteen, of Porter street; Joseph Tuberosa, fifteen, of Chelsea street, and James Rustino, sixteen, of Chelsea street, all of East Boston.

As a result of admissions of the lads, police found that the barber shop of Frank Vaccaro of No. 196 Saratoga street, East Boston, was robbed during the night. Arrests of two other youths followed.

They are: Frank Stefano, fourteen, of Porter street, and John Morello seventeen, of Porter street both of East Boston.

WOODS AT MEDFIELD COMBED

R. Williams of the Framingham barracks.

SEEK TO TRAP YOUTHS.

Boston officers, wearing bullet-proof vests, are searching camps in Medfield, attired in civilian clothing. They believe the boys on seeing them will walk out for a chat, and then they can place the youths under arrest, shooting them if they resist.

Mrs. Ida B. Woolford who conducts a general store on North street, Medfield Junction, told of the visit of two boys to her store where they purchased a six-foot length of clothesline and two cans of corn. She said their descriptions were the same as those of Deshon and Samburski. The boy believed to be Deshon did all the talking, according to Mrs. Woolford.

The hunters today received the co-operation of Dr. E. H. Clarke, superintendent of the Medfield State Hospital, who opened the hospital doors to the posse for rest and refreshment and who placed his automobile at their service.

Boston's night police detail of twenty men were relieved today by a detail of thirty, bringing the posse total to well over 100. The Boston officers are equipped with bullet-proof vests, rifles, tear bombs, riot guns and revolvers.

Scores of persons reported seeing two young men answering the description of the two suspects, one of whom was heard coughing a deep hollow cough, in the vicinity within a few hours of the police arrival.

The objective of the search was a hidden camp, known to but few persons, where the two boys could stay indefinitely without being detected. A Medfield boy, Henry Cavenaugh, "tipped" the police to the camp and offered to guide them to it.

During the search a battered green canoe was found drawn up on the bank, with a new "painter" rope attached to it. No owner could be located in the town and it gave evidence of having been brought to the spot recently.

TO SEARCH ISLAND AGAIN.

Although Devil's Island has been searched before, it included within the scope of today's hunt and will be gone over with a fine tooth comb. A man was reported to have been seen there drawing water from a well, but disappeared before the search was made.

Later two young men, who closely resembled the suspects, hovered about a butcher cart on Main street, Medfield, leading the police to suspect that they have run out of food and planned to steal some supplies. The watchful vigilance of the driver frustrated the pair.

Several of the Summer cottages along Spot river have been entered and occupied for some time, it was discovered. In one shack a kettle of water, still warm, with the remnants of a meal still on the table was found.

DISCOVER STILL.

One incident of the search for the missing suspects, not connected in any way with their alleged crimes, was the discovery of a huge still in the woods. This was surrounded and when no one was found near, the outfit was demolished.

The clues leading the searchers to the Summer cottages are all based on the most accurate descriptions of the missing boys yet received. All who have seen them in Medfield particularly describe a scar on one boy's nose that is identical with that on Samburski, and describe his cough as that of a tuberculosis victim.

J. D. ROCKEFELLER TOO FAST FOR EGYPTIANS

Cairo, Egypt, April 29 (A.P.).—The intimation that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of New York, withdrew his offer of antiquities before the Egyptian to provide $10,000,000 for a museum Council of Ministers had an opportunity to discuss it is contained in an interview which Premier Ziwar has given to the newspaper Siasaa.

The premier is quoted as saying: "The Council of Ministers intended to discuss the offer, and its legal counsellor had prepared a lengthy note on the subject, but unfortunately before action could be taken we were informed that Mr. Rockefeller had withdrawn his offer."

WOMAN, MYSTERIOUSLY SLASHED, FOUND IN HOTEL

Suffering from knife gashes in abdomen, breast, leg and elbow, and with the tip of one finger sliced off, Mrs. Cecelia Hall of No. 41 Northfield street, Roxbury, was found today in a critical condition in the Hotel Malvon, Tremont street, South End. The woman checked in at the hotel at 1 a. m., but although she said she had received the knife slashes before that time, she would not reveal where or how they came to be inflicted. Attendants at the hotel found the woman in her room. She was removed to the City Hospital.

Slayers to Die, Swears Father of McSwiggin

Chicago, April 29.—Police Sergeant Anthony McSwiggin, father of the slain "hanging prosecutor," has sworn vengeance. The ambition of his life, he said, was to see his son took his place in thwarting criminals.

"I thought my life work was over," the father declared, "but it's just begun. I won't rest until I've killed my boy's slayers or have seen them hanged."

sons connected with the Chicago crime commission to obtain a special prosecutor and special Grand Jury to go into all phases of gang killings which have taken twenty-nine lives in Chicago this year.

Ralph Capone and his wife, Mrs. Peggy Capone, were taken in a raid on their Cicero apartment. In the apartment police found three books of instructions and a machine gun for a Thompson machine gun. It was a Thompson machine gun that riddled the bodies of the three men. Several rifles were also found in the house.

Almost every scrap of information in the hands of the police pointed to the fact that the killing of Doherty was long planned by rival beer purveyors from whom Doherty was wresting control of beer in Cicero and that McSwiggen and Duffy were killed merely because they happened to be in Doherty's company when the machine gunners pumped 100 bullets into Doherty's automobile.

The machine gun, a type designed for police use, and capable of firing 100 bullets a minute, offers one of the best available clews to the slayers, as police raided hundreds of places in Cook County in search of Doherty's rivals. It was believed that the sale of the weapon could be traced, after authorities had questioned a salesman for a hardware store who recently had disposed of a similar gun.

The theory that McSwiggin was out seeking evidence for the trial of Martin Durkin was abandoned; likewise that he was slain in revenge for his activity as a prosecutor. He was friendly with Doherty and Duffy and their presence together was merely social.

The campaign against gangsters and their resorts was in progress all night. All law enforcement agencies have been enlisted in the search and 200 arrests have already been made.

The underlying causes of the triple slaying will be investigated today by a coroner's jury of six prominent business men and civic workers, enlisted by Harry Eugene Kelly, president of the Union League Club.

Chicago Policeman Found Slain in Police Auto

Chicago, April 29 (A.P.).—Frank Blazek, young policeman, died today from pistol wounds and a beating mysteriously administered. He was found unconscious in a police department automobile a few minutes after he had made a report to headquarters.

Other policemen said they thought Blazek had arrested a man who then attacked the officer.

AUTO THIEVES' VICTIM IS FINED FOR CONTEMPT

Harry E. Brian's automobile was stolen, but he paid $16 for contempt of court in Roxbury Court today after the two alleged thieves had stood trial. Brian, who lives at No. 58 Brighton avenue, Allston, was not in court yesterday and he explained that he had left the courthouse, thinking the case had been heard. Judge Hayden imposed a fine of $10, however. The two alleged thieves, Alfred Mellor and Joseph Nelson of the South End, were both on parole from the Concord Reformatory. Nelson was returned there, but Mellor was given a two-year sentence in the House of Correction.

BOY 'LOST' IN HUB A FRAUD

Into the realm of fairy tales the sad story of Paul H. Aix, nine years old, was relegated today by the Boston police, disillusioned by a message from the boy's father in Saco, Me.

Paul was found wandering through the West End, hungry and lonesome, and after feeding him well, police drew from him a story of having "lost" his parents while en route with them from Saco to New York, where he said the family was going to live.

"Mama is lost but she will find me because she loves me," said Paul.

"You know she didn't get lost on purpose. Daddy and she just told me to wait for them in the station and they didn't come, back, so I started looking and then I spent the only ten cents I had for a knife, so I was pretty hungry when I met the policeman."

Meanwhile the lad's father, Henry Aix, was having the river near his home searched because he learned from other boys that Paul had planned to camp on an island there. Then he learned that his son was in Boston and later a broken child's savings bank revealed the source of funds for the journey.

According to the father, the boy will be placed in a very strict school in Worcester.

U. S. OFFICIAL TO SPEAK IN HUB ON AMERICANIZATION

W. W. Husband, assistant secretary of the United States Department of Labor, will be the principal speaker at an Americanization conference next Wednesday afternoon in the Gardner auditorium at the State House under the auspices of the State Department of Education. The conference will be opened by Governor Fuller. Other speakers listed are Judge James M. Morton, Mrs. Nathaniel Thayer, Miss Edna Phillips, Charles M. Herlihy, James Farrell, Mrs. Sarah A. Conboy, B. Loring Young, Robert Kelso, and Commissioner of Education Payson Smith.

WIELDS FIZZ BOTTLE FOR KNOCKOUT

Kathryn Ray, the hard-hitting actress, wielded a telling blow with a fizz bottle and put Jack Osterman, vaudeville performer, to sleep at the Texas Guinan Club in New York City following a quarrel. She had the last word and the last blow.

POLICEMAN IS NAMED IN A 'FIXING' CASE

A charge that he solicited a $25 bribe from an autoist he accused of being drunk, will be disputed tomorrow by Patrolman Paul E. Preeper of the Roxbury Crossing station before a trial board of captains at police headquarters.

The patrolman is accused in general of conduct unbecoming an officer. Police are withholding the name of the man that made the complaint.

DENIES HAVING DRINK.

According to the charges, this man stopped his car in a Roxbury street and went into a restaurant. When he came out again Patrolman Preeper was standing beside the car and accused the motorist of being drunk, it is alleged.

Despite the auto owner's protest that he had not had even a single drink, the officer is alleged to have led him away and to have said on the way to a box: "You can fix this up for $25."

When the man insisted that he was not drunk, the officer is alleged to have ordered him to leave his car and go home on a trolley and he (the cop) would deliver the car to the man's place of business in the morning.

HOME BY TROLLEY.

The man went home by trolley, but in the morning told his employer, who informed an assistant district attorney.

A watch was set, it is alleged, and Patrolman Preeper drove up in the car and was identified by witnesses.

The policeman declares he made no allicitation, but to save the motorist advised him not to drive his car drunk, but to go home on a street car.

"Steamship Chantier will reach Spitzbergen tomorrow night," said Byrd's message. "Navy and Marine Corps personnel have done splendidly."

but would retain title to their Bar Harbor mansion.

All testimony in the case was taken privately in Judge Sturgis' chamber, the testimony consuming surprisingly little time.

Then the principals came out and it was announced that everything was all arranged, the cruel and abusive charge had been sustained and Mrs. Furfey would be granted the divorce immediately.

"Oh, I'm so happy," declared Mrs. Furfey to the newspapermen when she emerged. "Indeed, I am the happiest woman in the world.

"This decree proves the innocence of those men he named.

"I have no immediate plans for the future. I will get my dog—the only one I can trust—and I will go away for a while, but I will not tell anybody where."

Asked if she contemplated marriage again in the near future she shook her head emphatically, with a "No, indeed," at the finish. Then she hastened to add that she was not soured on marriage and the future would take care of itself.

Dr. Furfey, before he left Ellsworth, said to the press:

"I have so much business in Boston that I was anxious to get back. I have cases coming to me in droves."

PHONE 'HUSHER' QUINN USED IS SHOWN JURY

A "husher phone," which ex-Chief William L. Quinn of Swampscott admitted he used to keep his telephone conversations from his office strictly private, was introduced by the government today at the trial of Quinn and 12 others in Federal Court on conspiracy charges.

Quinn also admitted having a special switch so that the desk man in the other room of the police station could not listen in on his connection.

The former chief declared that he delayed a much-discussed rum raid so as to make a bigger catch, and denied the stories of government witnesses that he postponed the raid to give the rum-runners time to escape.

"I was given a tip by telephone, in a woman's voice, that there was liquor on the Johnson estate and I got a search warrant immediately," said Quinn. "With other officers I rode around for a while because I had been told there were trucks on the way from Boston and I wanted to get liquor, men, trucks and everything.

"Except when we went to Lynn to lunch, we had the Johnson estate in view for all but three or four minutes. Those few minutes I spent getting another police officer. I raided the place in the early afternoon and seized all the liquor there."

Three policemen, still on the Swampscott force, testified for their former chief, and one of them, Albert B. Owens, declared that at 1 a. m. he was stopped by Francis Ward, now a defendant in the conspiracy trial, and led to the Johnson estate to trap men supposed to be landing liquor. The men, however, were not there in spite of the "tip," said Owens.

Judge Morton instructed the jurors that Patrick A. McDonnell, of Boston, one of the defendants, has not been in any way connected with any other defendants in the testimony given by government witnesses, except after September, 1924, and in considering testimony relating to prior events they must not connect McDonnell.

RUNAWAY MAINE BOY FOUND WANDERING HUB STREETS

WORRIED
Paul H. Aix of Saco, Me., told police he wasn't lost but his mother and father seemed to be and he was worried about them.

"HE'S A FRAUD," SAYS DAD
Word from Maine today was that Paul, who is 9, had broken open his savings bank and run away. He is tired out in Hub after police found him.

SPENDS HIS CASH IN HUB
Paul had long wanted a knife, so when the chance came to get one for a dime he snapped it up, although the dime represented his last penny. Now he has to be sent home for a "licking."

Charges Big U. S. Colleges Bar Jewish Students

HARVARD NAMED IN ATTACK

Adolph Lewisohn Says Universities Fear Predominance of His Race in Classes

New York, April 29 (A.P.)—American Gentiles fear that Jews will predominate in their leading universities and are practicing an exclusion policy to prevent this, in the opinion of prominent Jews campaigning for $5,000,000 for a Jewish college already under construction.

From Harvard, as one of the universities named, has come a flat denial of the charges already. Henry Pennypacker said no religious nor social quotas were assigned.

DENIAL AT COLUMBIA.

Columbia University issued this official statement today: "No discrimination has been practiced by Columbia University against Jews or any other class or denomination. This charge several times before has been made against Columbia and disproved. The requirements for admission are framed in the most liberal spirit and contain nothing which bars any man or woman on account of race or religion."

Princeton and Dartmouth also are named by Jews in their charges.

The charges were made by Adolph Lewisohn, banker, and Gustavus A. Rogers, lawyer, at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club to raise $1,000,000, one-fifth of the fund required for the Yeshiva of America, the Jewish college.

DON'T WANT "PIOUS JEWS."

Mr. Lewisohn said his grandsons had been excluded from one of the biggest universities.

"It is not a matter of absolute exclusion so much as restriction and discrimination," Mr. Rogers explained.

"The universities are not opposed exactly to having Jews in their student body, but they want only the Jew who is up to their social standard. They do not want the pious Jew.

"The schools fear a Christian rebellion by students who do not care to associate with Jews, and they fear a predominance of Jews in their student bodies.

HAVE OWN COLLEGES.

"I know of one Eastern university which has 2,400 applicants for a quota of 850 for Greater New York, and it could fill this quota entirely with Jews, yet very few get into it."

Mr. Rogers believes that eventually Jews, Catholics and Protestants will have their own universities.

"Yeshiva, however, will have no bars," he says. "The Catholic, for example, who wishes to take a course in Jewish literature will be welcome."

No Race Line, Says President of Brown

Providence, April 29 (A.P.)—"Brown University has never excluded, and never will exclude, any man on sectarian or racial grounds," President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University today in a statement issued in response to charges made in New York that the big American colleges and universities are making discriminations against the Jews.

"The principles of Roger Williams are too deeply ingrained in us to allow that," continued Dr. Faunce. "The ignorant and the immoral are excluded, and always we intend they shall be.

"If we have to choose between two men, one of whom is loyal to the common good, unselfish and serviceable, while the other would enter college merely to get everything for himself, we should undoubtedly choose the former. But the choice will never be on grounds of race or religion."

MALDEN A. O. H. AUXILIARY TO FEATURE CHARLESTON

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Division 41, Ancient Order of Hibernians, will have its annual whist and dancing party tomorrow night at Powers and Pythian Hall, Maplewood square, Malden. The feature will be a Charleston exhibition by Miss Doris Gowell of Malden. A fine program of old-time and modern dancing has been arranged, with many novelties. The dance committee includes Miss Gertrude Lyons, chairman; Marguerite L. Sullivan, Mae White, Mary Madden, Catherine O'Brien, Catherine Rudolph, Anna Torpey, Marcella Commeau and Eleanor Shea. The whist committee includes Mrs. Mary L. Sullivan, president of the auxiliary; Mrs. Mary White, Elizabeth Doris, Anna Torpey, Catherine Holden, Elizabeth Powers and Annie Spencer.

Somerville Break

Boys were responsible for a break in the A. and P. store at No. 74 Union square, Somerville. Entrance was gained by forcing a rear window, and $4 in change was taken with cigarettes and candy.

RICH, HE'S 'SLAVE'

TRYING TO FIND SHIP TO LEAVE COUNTRY

New Bedford Trail Leads to Boston as She Plans Flight to Portugal

Fleeing from the country rather than go to the government colony in Louisiana, Mrs. Antonio Ramos of Ludlow, officially pronounced suffering from leprosy, is hiding in Boston trying to get passage aboard a ship back to Portugal, agents of both State and city public health departments believe.

Traced from her home to New Bedford, where she tried to find old acquaintances to aid her in her flight, the trail was picked up again leading to Boston.

It was learned in the Whaling City that the woman left by auto for this city, intending to see the Portuguese consul with a view to obtaining a passport and passage to her native home.

The health officers got in touch with Consul Ferriera and plans were laid to have her detained and placed under close quarantine.

No fear is expressed by physicians that she will spread the disease as it is claimed that it is far less communicable than smallpox.

Dr. George H. Bigelow, State commissioner of public health, said that there is little danger in her presence in the city.

"The communicability of leprosy is comparatively small when compared with that of smallpox," he declared. "There is very little danger of anyone contracting leprosy by casual contact such as might be experienced in a street car or train or on the street. Of course we shall take every precaution to protect the public and Mrs. Ramos will be apprehended and quarantined wherever she is recognized."

It was further pointed out that although she is suffering from leprosy, it is in a light form and scarcely noticeable.

SOUGHT FRIENDS.

When she left Ludlow, Dr. Ramos threw pursuers off her trail by the announcement that she planned to consult a Portuguese physician in Brooklyn, N. Y. When she failed to show up there the search turned to New Bedford, and it was learned that a woman answering to her description and giving the name of Ramos called at the address of old friends in that city. Then she inquired the address of Dr. Madeiros Dacosta, the Portuguese consul, saying she had come from Ludlow and wanted to get a passport for return to Portugal.

Several other persons accompanied the woman in an automobile and remained outside while she prosecuted her inquiries.

Mrs. Ramos is 30 years old and married. She lived in Ludlow for five years. Several days ago she was pronounced a leper and ordered confined to her home, but fled when no guard was stationed there.

WIFE SAYS SHE WON HER GIANT FROM NINA

Madison, Ct., April 29.—The giant clam digger has gone out of the life of Nina Wilcox Putnam, comely author, it was learned here today, following the announcement that in a second attempt she has obtained a divorce from R. J. Sanderson at Palm Beach, Fla.

The first decree, obtained in Providence, in January, 1924, was vacated the next day because the novelist had not established proof of residence in the State.

"HE'S THROUGH WITH HER."

Ellsworth Bassett, clam digger, chauffeur and painter of Madison, bobbed up suddenly in the hectic adventures of Nina when she betrayed an attachment for him. He became her chauffeur and later her business manager in Florida.

But it's all over now. Mrs. Bassett said today that she and her husband have been reconciled—as "reconciled as any married couple." Bassett is engaged in the automobile business in Madison and has severed all business relations with Nina.

When did he return from Florida? Oh, some time ago, so long that Mrs. Bassett couldn't remember exactly.

NEWS TO HER.

Mrs. Bassett expressed mild surprise when informed by the Boston Evening American that Nina had made good in her second attempt to break the marriage ties that bound her to Sanderson.

She said: "I knew she was crying to obtain a divorce, but this is news to me."

The reconciliation of the Bassetts came about after a series of episodes that ended in Florida.

Bassett, 6 feet 4½ inches tall, was engaged to paint a cottage in the East River section of Madison, which had been leased by Mrs. Sanderson. The painting was never done, but Bassett and his suitcase moved in.

Later Bassett acted as chauffeur for the writer on a six weeks' tour of Canada, the party being made up of Mrs. Sanderson, her son, John Francis Putnam, 6, and a colored nurse. When he returned from the Canadian trip Bassett broke the news to his wife that he was through with being a husband.

EX-WIFE NEVER CALLED FRIEND 'WONDERFUL'

Denial that she made love to a roomer named Ross, that she kissed him or called him "My Wonderful One," was made in Suffolk Probate Court today by Mrs. Mary A. Stevens.

The woman took the stand in opposing the suit of John M. Stevens of Temple street, Boston, who seeks a revocation of the divorce granted his wife, October 30, 1925.

Stevens claims the woman gave false testimony, and that he was informed she had withdrawn the suit, with the result that he did not contest the divorce case.

The couple were married March 2, 1897, and have two sons, John and Joseph.

Mrs. Stevens, whose case is handled by the office of William R. Scharton, admitted under cross-examination that she attended dances with Ross, and played cards with him at a friend's house.

Mrs. Stevens denied carrying Ross' breakfast to him in bed, as her husband claimed, or that she had decided to call her next child Ross.

She said that since her marriage she had trouble because of her husband's jealousy.

Miss Catherine Lord, fiancee of young Stevens, described card games during which she said the elder Stevens abused his wife every time he lost a point.

CITY HALL SEES PAY CUTS IN SALARY PLAN

Declaring the tentative recommendations of Mayor Nichols' committee on standardization of salaries mean future wage slashes, city employes were up in arms today.

The committee, of which Charles J. Fox, budget commissioner, is chairman, was appointed some time ago and has examined the payrolls of the treasurer's department, the department of weights and measures, statistics, city clerk's and retirement and city planning boards.

They have tentatively recommended that $2,700 be the new maximum for outside paymasters in the treasury department, which now pay $3,500, and the next maximum for county paymaster be $2,900 as compared to $3,600 at present.

It is understood that the commission's plan does not contemplate immediate cuts, but instead recommends that the new maximum be put into effect whenever the present positions become vacant.

Charles F. Carr, chairman of the Finance Commission, declined the request of Mayor Nichols to serve on the commission. It is said that while not unsympathetic with the aims of the body, he believes that deadwood with which the payrolls are loaded, should be removed.

3 MORE SELL FLORIDA SWAMP AS REAL ESTATE

Washington, April 23 (I.N.S.)—The postoffice department struck another blow today in its drive against alleged fraudulent Florida land operators.

Use of the mails was denied the Lee Savage Estates C. A. Allen and H. H. Rolfe, of Chicago, charged with obtaining money fraudulently in sale of lots at Baldwin Heights and Palmdale Heights, Fla. Postal inspectors said two-thirds of Palmdale Heights was under water most of the year, and Baldwin Heights was unimproved swamp land.

FORMER ENVOY POTTER DEAD

Philadelphia, April 29 (A.P.)—William Potter, chairman of the board of trustees of Jefferson Medical College and a former envoy to Italy, died at the Jefferson Hospital today. He was seventy-four years old.

Mr. Potter's death was caused by appendicitis, for which he was operated on about a week ago. He is survived by two daughters.

In 1892, he was appointed Minister to Italy, holding that post until 1894. President McKinley offered him the post of Amassador to Germany, but he declined.

WATER SUPPLY HEARING TO TAKE PLACE FRIDAY

The much discussed and fought over majority and minority bills to increase the water supply of Worcester and the metropolitan district is due for further airing before the Senate Committee on Ways and Means.

The action of the Senate was in accordance with the wishes of President Wellington Wells, who wanted to be on the safe side in case a legal technicality will be raised in the future. Hearings before this committee will start Friday afternoon.

COURT BLOCKS STATE VOTE ON 'GERRYMANDER'

Supreme Bench Dashes Hopes of Democrats in Redistricting State

All hopes of the Democrats to block the bill to reapportion Senatorial, Councillor and Representative districts of the State were dashed today, when the Supreme Court handed down a decision against a referendum.

The court was asked by the House to answer the questions: "Would the bill, if enacted, be subject to the referendum amendment;" The answer was in the negative.

The gist of the lengthy decision is that "the mode and time of the apportionment are prescribed by the Constitution and it must be held that the people designed that it should be exercised at that time and by that mode only."

The bill passed the House and Senate. In the upper chamber an emergency preamble, making the bill effective immediately, was added. The preamble is now before the House and will, in all probability, be passed.

Democrats have attacked the bill as the biggest gerrymander in the history of the State. A referendum was the only means by which the Democrats hoped to overthrow the bill.

HUB GIRL PIANIST SAILS TO STUDY IN ENGLAND

New York, April 29.—Miss Lillian Winer, seventeen-year-old Boston pianist, whose concerts have brought high praise from numerous critics, sails tomorrow on the Leviathan for London, where she will complete her studies under Prof. Tobias Matthay. She will be accompanied by her mother, Mrs. J. K. Winer, to be gone two years.

Miss Winer, who took up the piano at eight and gave her first concert when she was twelve, has been studying in Boston under Professor [illegible], son. She gave her last concert there on April 9.

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Registered P. S. Patent Office.

New York, April 29.—In a setting of fragrant, delicately tinted Spring blossoms, Mr. and Mrs. William Randolph Hearst gave their annual costume ball last evening at the Hearst apartment, No. 137 Riverside Drive.

The entertainment proved to be one of the most brilliant and delightful events of the "little season" and more than 300 guests, all in fancy dress, danced in the Spanish gallery, panelled in rare carved wood, several centuries old and lined with Mr. Hearst's famous collection of porcelains and armor.

More and more New York society is reverting to the annual ball idea. During the late Mrs. William Astor's reign three of Gotham's sovereign hostesses gave annual balls—Mrs. Astor, the late Mrs. Ogden Mills and the late Mrs. Elbridge T. Gerry. Following the passing of that socially redoubtable trio, the fad for annual balls was swept into oblivion.

SCENE OF RARE BEAUTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Hearst are among the many in the last few years who have again brought the "annual ball" idea into favor.

Great clusters of cherry, apple and quince blossoms, intermingled with dogwood and lilacs, transformed the Spanish gallery into a horticultural paradise and Mr. and Mrs. Hearst, with their eldest son and daughter-in-law, the George Hearsts—who came East from San Francisco especially for last evening's entertainment—received the guests, who arrived at 10 o'clock.

At midnight, when the ball was at its height, the scene in the Spanish gallery was one of rare beauty, and presented a fantastic riot of color.

Leaders of society and men prominent in the political life of the nation appeared as bronzed and powdered ladies of the French court, gallant knights of old, Russian peasantry, harlequins, bonnie lassies of Scotland, pierrots and pierrettes, cowboys, etc.

SING OLD-TIME MELODIES.

Scintillating jewels glistened on the fashionable feminine guests in the varicolored spotlights played on these gyrating to the strains of Vincent Lopez' orchestra from Cass Lopez and Eddie Davis and Harry Akst's orchestra from the Club Lido, and at intervals old-fashioned song slides were flashed on a silver screen, placed at the far end of the gallery, and the guests joined in the singing of the popular melodies.

The Prince and Princess Francesco Rospigliosi, the Viscount Holmesdale, son and heir of the Earl of Amherst; Prince Eugene Lubomirski, just recovered from his serious motor smashup down in Palm Beach, and Sir Joseph and Lady Dereen were among Mr. and Mrs. Hearst's guests, as were Mr. Oliver H. P. Belmont, who was congratulated on all sides on the birth of her first great-grandson (an infant who will, at some future day, become the Duke of Marlborough; Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, the popular "Tony" Drexel Biddle, Jr., and his wife, who was Mary L. Duke; the "Freddie" Frelinghuysens, Mr. and Mrs. J. Philip Benkard, "Josh" and Mrs. "Josh" Cowden.

SOCIAL LEADERS PRESENT.

Mr. and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson (Mrs. Robertson will be remembered as Cordelia Drexel Biddle), Mr. and Mrs. William A. Prime, Mr. and Mrs. David Dows, Peter A. B. Widener and his lovely wife; Mr. and Mrs. E. Clarence Jones, just arrived from "Villa Yalta," at Palm Beach; the Allen Gourgenar Wellmans, John Gaston and his bride, nee Mrs. "Freddie" Gwynne; Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw, 3d, the Louis G. Kaufmans and "Jimmie" and Delphine Dodge Cromwell.

Others at the ball were Judge and Mrs. Elbert H. Gary, Mr. and Mrs. James Watson Gerard, Judge and Mrs. William Young, Colonel and Mrs. William Hayward, Mr. and Mrs. Harold M. Roberts, Mr. and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Gerard, Mr. and Mrs. Martin B. Sajorins, the Herbert Bayard Swopes, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Daly, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Fargo, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Gimbel, Mr. and Mrs. Edmond P. O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Irwin, Mr. and Mrs. Reed Kilpatrick and "Buzzy" and Rose Washburton.

AMONG OTHERS THERE.

Also present were Mr. and Mrs. John W. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Chandler Christy, Mr. and Mrs. Robert McAdoo, Mr. and Mrs. Bryce Turner, Mr. and Mrs. John Baragwanath, Mr. and Mrs. Gregoire Iswolski, Mr. and Mrs. M. Dorland Doyle and the Florenz Ziegfelds.

Others attendings were Mrs. Charles Cary Rumsey, Mrs. James H. Kidder, Mrs. Herbert Shipman, Mrs. Clara Ball Walsh, Mrs. Julia Hoyt, Mrs. Marjorie Oelrichs, Mrs. Raymond T. Baldness Can Be Prevented

Unnecessary to Lose Hair in Most Cases

A little attention to the scalp will save your hair, and if the right methods and preparation are used the hair can be brought back in quantity and quality. The scalp should be kept clean and massaged lightly for a few minutes each day. Petroleum has been found to be wonderfully effective in the treatment of the scalp, and when combined with other ingredients of proven worth it makes the ideal tonic for the hair and scalp. That is why Noonan's Hair Petrole is so successfully used because it contains refined petroleum, with no bad odor, and other ingredients which cleanse and stimulate the scalp. Noonan's Hair Petrole can be obtained at all drug and department stores. Barbers apply it.

'POLICE PROBE UP TO HIGHER-UPS'—O'BRIEN

District Attorney Says He Has Done All He Can by Criticising Cops

District Attorney O'Brien declared today it is now "up to the proper officials" to take up his charges of inefficiency in the Boston police department and act upon them.

"I have done my full duty and will not do anything further because I cannot," he said. "It is up to certain other public officials to act on my suggestions if they wish to make the department an efficient one.

"The office of district attorney is an excellent basis for determining the delinquencies and shortcomings of a police department, and out of my experience I felt duty bound to the city of Boston, because of the usually high standing of its police department, to call attention of the proper authorities to laxity that exists."

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson said he welcomed investigation by the proper authorities or constructive criticism from anybody.

SPIRITS MOURN THE PASSING OF YOUNG'S

Shades of Many Notables Who Stayed There Resent Razing of Hotel

As the shades of many American and European celebrities roamed about on high today they fell into a reminiscent mood as they talked of the passing of Young's Hotel, which is to be torn down to make way for a modern 1,200-room hotel.

As the shade of Adelina Patti, the greatest woman singer of all time, conversed with a neighbor, her thoughts were of the days when she was the toast of two continents and she dined regularly at Young's. She talked of that delectable dish that was served to her there at her special request—a dish that could not be purchased at any hotel today because of game laws forbidding it. That dish was the brains of woodcock on toast.

HER FAVORITE DISH.

"It was one of Pattie's favorites," said Manager Walker today. "It was served at her special request and, so far as I know, no other person ever ordered it. The brains of the woodcock were broiled or baked and served on toast as the game course. Patti often dined here with friends and that dish was generally a part of her dinner."

Other prominent people who dined at Young's were Presidents Grant, Taft, Roosevelt, Wilson and Coolidge, ex-Senator John W. Weeks, Tom Lawson, who lived there for twenty years; Joseph Jefferson, Richard Olney, Samuel J. Elder, General Charles H. Taylor, Melvin O. Adams, Thomas Proctor, Walter I. Badger, George Dixon, Frederick C. Dumaine, C. D. Burrage and George Swasey.

WHERE LAWSON WROTE.

When Tom Lawson lived in rooms 73-8-4 he kept 1,000 toy elephants there. They were composed of bronze, gold, ivory and other materials. One was so large that a building inspector was called to the hotel to determine whether the rafters under the floor were strong enough to support the weight. Another was so small that its outline could hardly be seen by the naked eye. Lawson wrote "Frenzied Finance" and "Friday the 13th" there.

The leading Republicans of the state, including the late Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, dined regularly in room No. 5 daily since Governor Greenhalge took office. Members of his staff started the practice of dining in that particular room.

Many leading political and professional organizations have staged luncheons and banquets there regularly including the Massachusetts Club, Curtis Club, Harvard Odontological Club, American Academy of Dental Science and Massachusetts Agricultural Club.

'BUS GRAFTER BAGMAN' SEEN AT CITY HALL

Slips in and Out of Offices, Even the Outer One of Mayor's Suite

The mysterious alleged "bagman" in the City Council graft investigation slipped in and out of City Hall today, penetrating as far as the Mayor's outer office and the council chamber anteroom, according to those "in the know."

When he was gone, nobody ventured to mention his name but several reported him as saying he was at the hall on business—not "monkey business" either.

Staying around the council chamber anteroom, or anywhere in the hall, on anything but official business is not very easy since the graft charges were made in connection with the granting of bus permits, for Patrolman James Halligan has been specially instructed to "keep 'em moving."

A City Council investigation will be made, it is said by friends of the councillors, regardless of the result of the probe being made by District Attorney O'Brien and Attorney General Benton into the stories told by Leo J. Conway.

President Keene of the council is reported waiting for the other investigations to end before proceeding into a scrutiny of all bus permits granted by the present council.

U. S. Job for Yale Man

New Haven, Ct., April 29 (A.P.)—Ray K. Westerfield, professor of economics at Yale University, has been notified of his appointment as chief of the section of statistics of the United States Treasury, effective June 15.

"NEAR BEER" PLEA FAILS MARLBORO DEFENDANT

Marlboro, April 29.—It was to be near beer, Worthy President Joseph A. Gallagher of the Marlboro Eagles explained in court today, but before the janitor, Benjamin W. Gibby, could get it near enough, the beer was seized. President Gallagher, who is a city councillor, was a witness in defense of Gibby, charged with manufacturing liquor and keeping it for sale. The charge was not sustained and on the former Gibby was fined $100, the fine being suspended for one year. The president of the Eagles, in whose building the 900 bottles of beer were seized, said it was made in preparation for an initiation celebration and was to have been de-alcoholized and made near beer.

CONCERT TO AID CHILDREN'S VACATIONS

By JAMES WALSH

A musicale in aid of the Children's Vacation House at Sunset Point, Nantasket, will be given under the auspices of Immaculate Conception Branch, Massachusetts Catholic Women's Guild, in Steinert Hall, next Monday night. The program is under the direction of Mrs. Caroline Damiano McSweeney, Mrs. Mahoney Comerford and Mrs. Margaret Ford Clarkin. Among the artists who will appear are Mrs. McSweeney, Miss Damiano, Miss Nina Spaulding, violinist; Miss Grace Donohue, harpist; Miss Mildred Ford, reader, and Miss Helen Tierney, soloist. Mrs. Katharine B. Bennett is general chairman of all committees. Mrs. W. F. Handschumacher is the treasurer.

The Vacation House at Sunset Point, is an adjunct of the Archdiocesan Catholic Charitable Bureau. Every Summer, more than six hundred poor, sickly boys and girls who never have a chance to really go to the seashore for a rest and recuperation, are taken to the house at Nantasket, given plenty of wholesome things to eat and milk to drink, and are refreshed and strengthened so that they can better withstand the hardships they necessarily have to go through in the hot city. The Rev. George P. O'Conor, director of the Catholic Charitable Bureau, has accepted an invitation to be present at the musicals.

Members of Fr. John DeValles Council No. 213, Knights of Columbus, will present "Sunshine," a comedy with music, in three acts, in Boston College High School Hall, James street, South End, on Friday evening, May 14. The show will be under the direction of Larry Donnelly. It has been in rehearsal for the past month and promises to be one of the best amateur productions of the season.

The cast includes Maudelia McCann, Katherine Riley, Katherine Murphy, Marion Taffe, James Long, Margaret Smith, Julius Sandberg, Clarence Adams, Jeremiah Sheehan, Catherine Waggett. Mary Stapleton will take the part of "Mary Sunshine." There also is a mixed chorus of men, boys and girls.

The Boston College Club of Charlestown will have its eleventh annual assembly next Monday evening in the Swiss Room, Copley Plaza Hotel. Various committees in charge of the arrangements have furnished a list of surprises that will delight all those who attend. Edward F. Sweeney is chairman of the affair. The officers of the club are assisting. They are Eugene F. Gorman, president; William M. Flinn, vice-president; Francis J. Campbell, treasurer, and Edward P. Brickley, secretary. Others on various committees include Joseph J. Keegan, James P. McGuire, Charles Wilsey, James Phalen, Wilson Geary, George Ward, Dennis Manning, Thomas Flavin, Patrick J. Sullivan, David V. Kelliher and Harry Campbell.

The Confraternity of the Holy Cross will meet at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The services will consist of the Way of the Cross and Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament. The 8 o'clock mass in that church tomorrow morning will be celebrated for the members of the confraternity.

A whist party in aid of the Home for Destitute Catholic Children, Harrison avenue, will be given at Hamilton Hall, Hamilton Theatre Building, Bowdoin street, Dorchester, tomorrow night. Mrs. Mary Ford Sullivan Murphy is the chairman of the committee in charge. Others on the committee include Mrs. Anthony Burkhard, Mrs. John H. Martin and Mrs. Frederick York. Mrs. Hammond J. Collins is in charge of auction. All friends and patrons of the home are invited.

FIFTY DIE IN RUSSIA AS BRIDGE COLLAPSES

Leningrad, April 29 (I.N.S.)—Fifty persons were drowned today when a bridge over the Ochta River collapsed. Victims of the accident were passengers on a railroad train for Kushelov. The bridge was a temporary affair which had been built while a new steel bridge was being constructed.

UNDERTAKER SO SPEEDY HE KILLS 'PROSPECT'

Moscow, April 29 (I.N.S.)—Iger Evgrafevitch Masloff, the oldest coffin maker in Moscow, is held for manslaughter, charged with provoking the death of a sick man by measuring him for a coffin before he died.

Masloff heard that his neighbor, Pavel Pavlovich, was ill. Following the Russian custom he solicited trade. Pavel's family said he was not dead, but if he should die Iger would get the undertaking job.

Iger suggested that it might save time if he took Pavel's measurements then. The family refused. Iger wasn't sentimental, however, and during an absence of members of the family from Pavel's bedside he slipped into the room and began applying the tape measure to the sick man.

Pavel recognized Masloff, wailed, "I'm done," and died a few minutes later.

HARRIMAN BUYS ZINC CONTROL IN SILESIA

Washington, April 29 (I.N.S.).—W. Averill Harriman, American capitalist, has purchased a controlling interest in the zinc industry in Upper Silesia for $10,000,000, and the Polish Diet has passed a measure authorizing the transaction, according to a Polish Telegraph Agency dispatch received here today.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Misses Braggiotti to Conduct Matinee of Dance at Repertory Theatre

A MATINEE OF DANCE, staged by Miss Berthe and Miss Francesca Braggiotti, is the Denishawn contribution to the artistic Spring season, this year to be put forth on the stage of the Repertory Theatre on May 14, and not, as in other years, to be an al fresco affair.

SPECIALLY PLANNED and arranged creations of the dance accompanied by unusual and delightful lighting and costuming is to be the highly emphasized note at the performance. Youthful devotees of the dance are down for appearances.

THE MISSES AMY and Helen Lang, daughters of the Malcolm Langs; Miss Helen Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Irving P. Marshall; Miss Polly Powers, the Leland Powers daughter, and Miss Priscilla Howes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Osborne Howes, will dance.

CERTAIN SMART SET Bostonians, specially those having Berkshire and Aiken affiliations, are interested in today's wedding ceremonial in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's, New York, uniting Miss Viberta Vernon and Giraud Foster.

THE BRIDEGROOM is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Giraud Foster of Lenox, where they have a lovely estate in that region of justly famous country homes. The bride's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Cottier Vernon of No. 290 Park avenue, and spend their Winters at Aiken, S. C.

DR. HOMER GAGE and Mrs. Gage, of Worcester, prominent in the world of sport, are down on the sailing list for the steamship DeGrasse, now plowing her way westward from French ports.

ALSO HOMEWARD BOUND are Miss Adelaide Pearson and Miss Agnes Winter, after several months spent in the South of Italy and in that romantic and amazing land, Sicily. The DeGrasse brings over a large complement, nearly as large as each outgoing steamship carries, such is the tide of travel.

AMUSING LITTLE invitations, shaped after the toy-like French freight cars in which so many doughboys journeyed more or less comfortably over France during the World War) are going out from "The Grand Chef de Gare" and officers of "La Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux."

SUCH IS THE IMPOSING title of the Legion's "Playground," known in army parlance as the "40 and 8." This group is arranging a dance for May 15 at the Hotel Copley-Plaza and has asked prominent women hereabouts for their sponsorship.

OF COURSE NO SUCH list is complete unless it includes the name of Mrs. Lars Anderson, whose months of service at French and Belgian first aid stations won her high decorations from both governments, and from her associates in the merciful work the loving title of "Handy Andy."

MRS. MAYNARD LADD of Clarendon street is another Bostonian remembered with heartfelt thanks for her wartime service, likewise Miss Hope Gray of Mount Vernon place, whose role, that of an ambulance driver, was most creditably filled.

CHARLES P. CURTIS'S supper for Eastern Yacht Club potentates, a small and choice gathering, was the gayest of informal affairs, and completed a busy day for yachtsmen who fly the famous red and white pennant.

AFFAIRS AT THE Marblehead clubhouse will be swinging into seasonable shape soon, what with a gathering of the yachting clans who yearly make the rock-bound port their headquarters.

COMMODORE NATHANIEL ATER'S new schooner yacht, the building and completion of which is being watched with the greatest interest, will report on this side in plenty of time for the major yacht races. The Buccaneer is a doughty successor, so they say, to the cup-winning Queen Mab.

MOHAWK TRAIL PASSABLE NOW

The Mohawk Trail automobile highway through the Berkshires is passable, but still in poor condition, according to announcement made today by the Boston Motor Club, and motorists are advised to use the southerly route over Jacob's Ladder in heading through Western Massachusetts.

Warning is issued by the club of the impassable condition of the dirt highways in Vermont and Maine and the poor condition of New Hampshire roads beyond Plymouth and all these are reported not likely to be in good shape for another week or ten days.

On the Cape routes, road repairs between Middleboro and Onset on a five-mile stretch of highway, make a detour necessary. All roads to New York are open and in very good condition.

HELP FOR HERO CAME TOO LATE

Rutland, April 29 (A.P.).—Friendless, penniless, and in tattered garments, Tom Levy, a native of Russia, a World War veteran, of the A. E. F., without a living relative, suffering from pulmonary tuberculosis, tottered into the U. S. Veterans Hospital here about a year ago, coming from New York City. He died Monday and today he was given a military funeral by inmates, and laid to rest in St. Mary's Cemetery, in Holden.

For months hospital officials had endeavored to procure him a pension, and it was not until 48 hours after his death that the first check came, too late to prove to him that his sacrifice had been appreciated.

POTATO STRIKE REDUCES AROOSTOOK SHIPMENTS

Caribou, Me., April 29.—Aroostook farmers and others who have any potatoes to sell, and it is said that there are about 7,500 carloads in the county, have been left severely alone by down-country receivers for the last 10 days, the market being at a standstill, with but little demand and shipments dropping to about 50 scattered carloads a day of all kinds.

JAMAICA PLAIN WOMEN'S CLUB ANNUAL LUNCHEON

The Jamaica Plain Woman's Club will hold its annual luncheon at 1 o'clock on Tuesday, May 4, in the Alden Park Manor, Longwood. Mrs. Thomas G. Reed, president of the club, will be toastmistress. Mrs. Charles H. Adams, a former president, will speak. The committee in charge of the affair consists of Mrs. Edric Eldridge, Miss Minnie A. Gilbert and Mrs. Ethelbert Grabill.

IDEAL BRIDE, 21 TO 27; SPOUSE 25 TO 33

Richmond, Va., April 29 (A.P.).—The best age for women to marry is between 21 and 27, and for men between 25 and 33, in the opinion of Prof. Hornell Hart of the graduate department of Bryn Mawr College.

One of the principal speakers in a discussion of the "divorce evil" at the National Episcopal Congress here, Prof. Hart listed as leading causes of marital failure mismating, conflict, family finance and immaturity. He particularly stressed the last named as leading to "bankrupt" marriages.

With the Rev. Charles N. Lathrop of New York he thought the Church could perform a valuable service by helping engaged couples to obtain authoritative books of instruction.

WRECKED GRADUALLY.

Conceding that the problem "bristles with difficulties," Mr. Lathrop suggested that the church forbid the marriage by its clergy of couples who are not communicants. "Marriages do not often hit the rocks with suddenness," Professor Hart said. "Rather it is a gradual process. The business of building a family was not begun wisely and in clear vision, yet the church very often was in contact with the family while the foundations of the home were rotting out."

YOU CAN HELP.

Personal intervention by the church to prevent such failures and restore the solvency and sacredness of marriage.

"The highest contribution which the clergyman can make to the Kingdom of Heaven is in his daily labor with the people he touches," he declared.

He stressed the importance of husband and wife making conscious efforts to keep minor conflicts from crystallizing into threats menacing to the happiness and sanctity of the home.

Row Over Anthem of "Reds" Splits French City

Paris, April 29 (A.P.).—The approach of May Day is disturbing Nevers. Its forty thousand inhabitants elected a Socialist Mayor, who has decided May Day shall be celebrated officially, and that the town band shall play the "International" in the town park.

Some of the 60 members of the band objected to playing the Communist anthem. Mayor Pervin argued that as Soviet Russia had officially adopted the anthem and France had established diplomatic relations with that government the air no longer could be considered seditious.

The debate was acrimonious, but eventually a majority voted that the "International" should be played on condition that "the Marseillaise," the French national anthem, also be rendered.

PORTO DRY OR WET? COURT TO DECIDE

For the first time since the Volstead act has gone into effect, the U. S. Circuit Court of this district, of which Porto Rico is a part, has been called upon to decide whether prohibition is in effect on that island.

The issue has been raised by Manuel Ramos, a restaurant keeper of San Juan, who was sentenced by a Federal judge in that city to 90 days in jail together with a $300 fine for having sold liquor in his establishment to some Americans on July 4 of last year.

This brief, submitted in appeal of that sentence to the Circuit Court here, sets forth that before the Volstead act became law Congress had allowed the privilege of local option to Porto Rico and, therefore, the National Prohibition Law does not supersede that Congressional privilege.

Asst. U. S. Attorney George L. Farnum, for the government, argued in his brief that Porto Rico, a territory of the United States, came under the same set of prohibition laws as does the mainland and cited several instances where Porto Ricans are now serving sentences for violations of the Volstead act.

This argument was met by counsel for Ramos with the allegation that all such convictions and sentences are illegal.

WOMEN SOLONS FIGHT MOVIE CENSORSHIP

Washington, April 29 (I.N.S.).—Federal censorship of motion pictures was strongly condemned today by the three women comprising the "feminine bloc" in Congress.

From the home rather than from the Federal government must come the moral standards which will assure a demand for clean, wholesome pictures, is the belief of Representatives Florence P. Kahn (R.), California; Mary T. Norton (D.), New Jersey, and Edith N. Rodgers (R.), Massachusetts.

All were agreed that the individual communities and States, rather than the government, assisted by proper laws, is the proper sources from which censorship should originate.

Mrs. Kahn, a member of the Education Committee now considering two bills which would establish rigid Federal censorship of the films, said today there was "absolutely no reason why either should be enacted."

"They talk about how movies are degrading modern youth," said Mrs. Kahn, "and forget that parents, not the government, are responsible for their proper upbringing. It is the duty of parents to rear children with an appreciation of morality. If this were done and children were not permitted to run loose as soon as they climb out of their cradles there would be less talk of Federal regulation."

Mrs. Kahn strongly defended the progress of motion pictures and said few industries had developed in such a short time.

Mrs. Norton thoroughly agreed in the need of more home and less government training.

Mrs. Rodgers brought up the question of the possible barring of worthwhile educational films by the individuals comprising the censorship board.

"Many of the most interesting pictures shown today," said Mrs. Rodgers, "are purely educational. The proposed board might for various reasons take a dislike to such productions and either cut them or bar them outright.

"We know that many great authors have not been recognized for years and suddenly the merit of their works become apparent. If the motion picture industry were forced to get a permit from a Federal board before showing a picture it is possible that many valuable productions would be refused a license. Merit is not always recognized at the start."

Convention Ma Hear Pope Over the Radio

Rome, April 29 (I.N.S.).—The Pope may open the forthcoming Eucharistic Congress in Chicago with a speech transmitted from the Vatican by radio, it was learned today.

A powerful radio broadcasting plant is shortly to be installed in the Vatican, it is learned. By the use of this plant and amplifying receivers, it is hoped that the Pope's voice may be heard in the Chicago assembly.

properly show lack of respect for girls with whom they are allowed to associate is not wise.

It has taken the world half a million years to teach men a little respect for women. No college professor should contribute to undoing that work.

Boys should be taught to respect girls, girls should be taught to respect themselves, not encouraged in the contrary direction.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER will act no more. The stage has gone to the dogs, she is through, and says, "I am ready to die, and hope I will die. My work is through, what else is there?"

THERE IS MUCH else. Leisure to contemplate this earth, to study the work of others, and think for a year or two about what comes next, is important.

Two things in life are worth while. First, work that produces something worth while. And second, leisure, that you have earned, to contemplate this little earth on which you are a passenger, and the big machine of which it is a part.

YALE AND HARVARD professors show that the childhood of animals can be greatly reduced, the growth made more rapid.

They are able to produce in twenty-five days a male rat as big, strong and completely mature as was formerly produced in ninety days, thanks to "artificial selection" as opposed to nature's selection.

IT IS BELIEVED that similar experiments in feeding and heredity may produce full-sized domestic animals for food purposes in half the usual time. It is even suggested that the duration of human childhood might be cut down. That, however, is not needed. Carefully grown human brain of real capacity is more important than any quick growth.

THE BRITISH calmly add twelve cents a pound to the price of rubber.

Mr. Hoover, whose specialty is rubber, rages and demands "rigid economy in the use of rubber by 20,000,000 American automobile users." Nothing will come of that. Americans won't economize until they have to.

Second, Mr. Hoover urges, "Swift development of new sources of rubber, under strictly American control, in other parts of the world."

BUT WHY DOESN'T the United States government DO something?

It is thanks to the British government that British rubber men are able to tax automobile owners in America enough to pay Britain's debt to the United States.

We are afraid to let poor old Uncle Sam try his hand at anything practical. Why not give him a trial. He may not be any more of an incompetent moron than John Bull.

PROHIBITION straw votes are interesting. But what Congress will really do, when it comes to voting, with clergymen, women's clubs, etc., in mind, is shown by the vote "to put teeth into the prohibition law." New teeth were put in by the House of Representatives by a vote of 196 to 4, an absolute victory for the "drys."

HOW SHARP or useful the teeth will be is not certain.

Up to now indications are that you can lead an entire nation to ice water, but you can't make the whole nation drink it.

MORE HINDUS and Mohammedans were killed for religious reasons in India. If you ask a Mohammedan to have common sense and stop killing Hindus, he would accuse you of insulting Mohammed. If you told the Hindu to stop, he would say that some six-armed god approved the fighting.

It was that way once among Christian sects. The killing was done on a much bigger scale and more barbarously, with fire, boiling oil, the rack, etc. We have improved, but eternal vigilance is necessary. Nothing as easy as to start or as hard to stop as religious war.

READ A FEW LINES that tell how brains and machinery can reduce the number of workmen. Where four gas-fired furnaces with six men and a foreman did one thousand connecting rods an hour in Ford's plant, two electric furnaces now HARDEN AND DRAW thirteen hundred rods an hour in Ford's plant, two. The four gas furnaces and ten workmen only performed the drawing operation. Not the hardening.

Every step in Ford's factory shows machines replacing men, the only way to meet the United States labor problem.

BANGOR GASOLINE MEN FIGHT OVER SPUR TRACK

Bangor, Me., April 29.—Rival gasoline dealers were given a hearing before the Public Utilities Commission. Charles Murray, an independent dealer, claims he owns the land over which Maine Central Railroad spur tracks run to the tanks of the Texaco Company, adjoining his tanks. The railroad declined to use the tracks to set Texaco cars without permission of Mr. Murray, although the company claimed the right under a State law. The commission took the matter under advisement.

JUDGE RULES MRS. HOPPE NOT GUILTY OF CONTEMPT

New York, April 29.—Supreme Court Justice Mahoney denied the application of Willie Hoppe, former billiard champion, to cite his divorced wife, Alice B. Hoppe, for contempt of court.

Mrs. Hoppe, with whom their two children, Alice, 13, and William, 7, are now living, was charged with violating the terms of the agreement regarding their custody.

Justice Mahoney also decided that Mrs. Hoppe should have the children for six months out of each year.

RED MAN KILLS BECAUSE HE'S RATED AS INFERIOR

Salamanca, N. Y., April 29 (A.P.)—A smouldering fire of anger burning in a red man's breast because white workers were paid higher wages blazed up and Joseph R. Wolford, superintendent of the Smith Chemical Works at Red House was beaten to death, Enos Johnson, a Seneca Indian, is under arrest.

The case is the first in many years in Western New York in which an Indian is charged with violence against a white man.

The chemical plant is located just off the big Indian reservation near here and many Indians are employes.

Wolford was killed when he is said to have gone to ask Johnson to return to work after a month's layoff as the result of a fire. They quarreled, two witnesses said, and the Indian suddenly struck the white man on the head with a hammer.

PRINCE NAPOLEON, HEAD OF FAMILY, HAS SHOCK

Brussels, April 29 (I.N.S.).—Prince Victor Napoleon, head of the Napoleon family, has suffered a stroke of apoplexy and his condition is critical, Prince Victor, the son of Prince Napoleon and Princess Marie Clotilde de Savoie, was born at the Palais Royal, Paris, July 18, 1862. He married Princess Clementine of Belgium and has one son and one daughter. He was expelled from France in 1886.

2 CANDLESTICKS ON KING'S CHAPEL ALTAR

King's Chapel will have two large candlesticks on its altar. This is the first instance of a Unitarian Church having such ecclesiastical ornaments. They are the gift of Miss Hope Gray. The two vases, accompanying the candlesticks, are given by Mrs. J. Randolph Coolidge, in memory of her son, Captain Hamilton Coolidge.

HERO PENSIONS INSURE ZEAL

By JOSEPH F. O'CONNELL, Former Congressman of Boston.

The form of relief provided by the Casey-Thomas-Boston Evening American hero pension bill for dependents of policemen and firemen killed in the line of duty, is not only desirable but a public necessity.

It is highly essential to the morale and the efficiency of the police and fire departments that proper recognition be given to the families of men who sacrifice their lives for the welfare of the community.

Such a law would serve as a reward and a practical memorial to the valor of public servants and prove an inspiration to other members of the departments.

Hence any money thus expended by the State would be an investment. In return the various communities of th Comonnwealth would receive greater zeal and devotion to duty on the part of men whose daily routine is fraught with peril.

I consider that payment of annuities not to exceed the salaries of the deceased, would prove a positive and satisfactory method of relief. It would make it possible for citizens to feel that they, as tax payers, were sharing in tribute to such acts of heroism and in adequate compensation to those left behind.

As the percentage of policemen and firemen killed in the performance of duty is relatively small, the State would be more than repaid for such a system of relief.

The measure is timely. It sets an example. It has justice and fair play to commend it. It has strong appeal. I sincerely hope it will become a law.

WOMAN STRANGLED TO DEATH; HUSBAND HELD

Bristol, Ct., April 29 (A.P.)—Kazemar Florjanski was held without bail today on a charge of slaying his wife, Josephina, in their home. She had been choked to death, in the opinion of the medical examiner. Florjanski, police say, quarreled with his wife over money matters. He had sold some property and claimed to have lost in the transaction. According to his story, his wife refused to kiss him after the quarrel and he grabbed her by the throat. He fell asleep. This morning he found she was dead. Florjanski is 33 and his wife was 25. They came here from Mineola, L. I., and were to move today to Brookfield, L. I., where Mrs. Florjanski's parents live.

350 ORDERED OUT OF MINE COMPANY HOMES

Wheeling, W. Va., April 29 (A.P.).—Seventy-two union miners, occupying company houses at Mine No. 3, Elm Grove Coal Company, which resumed operations yesterday on a non-union basis, have been notified to vacate by May 8, Joseph Arkwright, superintendent, said today. More than 350 persons, including members of the miners' families, will be affected by the order.

Reward Valor

J. F. O'CONNELL
Former Hub Congressman, favors the Boston American Hero Pension bill for relief of dependents of slain police and firemen.

JAPS BAR FLIERS FROM FORMOSA

Tokio, April 29 (A.P.)—The War Office has informed the Spanish Minister to Japan that Captain Loriga and Captain Gallarza, the two Spanish aviators on a flight from Madrid to Manila, will not be permitted to land at any place on the Island of Formosa while on the way to Manila.

The order is due to the enforcement of military precautions for the protection of fortified areas. Permission will be granted the fliers, however, to land on specified areas of Formosa while flying from Manila to Tokio.

Manila, April 29 (A.P.)—Because of the hazards involved in an aerial crossing of the China Sea, two United States destroyers now in Hong Kong will leave that port before the Spanish aviators, Captains Loriga and Gallarza attempt this leg of their flight and take aviation to lend assistance if it be necessary. The Spaniards, flying from Madrid to Manila, are expected to cross the China Sea from Macao, near Hong Kong, to Aparri, Northern Luzon.

BIG GAINS BY ATLANTIC BANK

The Atlantic National Bank of Boston scored the largest gain in deposits on a percentage basis during the past year, leading sixty-five of the country's largest banks and trust companies.

This gain is shown by the roster of banks with deposits of $75,000,000 or over, brought up to April 13. The Atlantic National Bank showed a gain of 35.6 per cent. over April 6, 1925. Deposits on April 13 of this year were $114,043,000, as against $84,081,000 last April.

National City Bank of New York heads the list with the largest actual deposits, amounting to $795,935,000.

HOW FOREST FIRE LICKS ALONG

This forest fire in the Manomet section near Plymouth, which was battled day and night by 500 men, is virtually under control.

Goes to Wesleyan

Middletown, Ct., April 29 (A.P.)—Herbert C. Bell, professor of history at Howdoin College since 1912, has been appointed to a similar chair in Wesleyan University, it was announced today.

Plymouth, April 29. — Fighting desperately for hours, 600 firemen and volunteers got a dangerous forest fire in the Manomet section under control today after it swept over several square miles of timber land and threatened scores of homes.

The fire started on the estate of George R. Briggs, six miles from Plymouth, and burned northward before a brisk wind. Flames rose high in the air as the alarm and in a short time the fire-fighters were attacking the fire on a six-mile front, digging trenches to halt its onward sweep.

Large quantities of stacked cord wood are reported destroyed and it is believed that several camps in the Island Pond and Fresh Pond area were burned. Fire wardens are patrolling the smouldering district and officials are investigating the origin of the fire.

N. I. BOWDITCH ON COUNTY BOARD

Nathaniel I. Bowditch of Framingham today was appointed County Commissioner of Middlesex county to fill the place of Alfred L. Cutting of Weston, who died Monday.

Bowditch will serve the remainder of the year. The appointment was made by the two other commissioners, ex-Mayor Wardwell of Cambridge and Erson B. Barlow of Lowell, and Ralph N. Smith, clerk of courts. Bowditch will be sworn in tomorrow by Clerk Smith and Judge Charles N. Harris of Middlesex Probate court.

The new incumbent is sixty-one years old and a trustee of the Massachusetts Agricultural College. He has been engaged in extensive farming in Framingham and was at one time president of the trustees of the Middlesex County Extension Service, an organization for the furtherance of farming.

HOUSE IN MEDLEY OF TALKS ON ALL TOPICS

Washington, April 29 (A.P.)—Two hours today were set aside by the House with six members to discuss a wide variety of subjects.

Representative Busby, Democrat, Mississippi, turned to political patronage in his State; Mrs. Julius Kahn, a Republican member from California, selected reapportionment of House membership under the 1920 census, while Representative Denison, Republican, Illinois, elected the subject of granting congressional authority for bridge construction. Representative Mills Republican, New York, and Representative Garner, Democrat, Texas, each had 15 minutes to debate the bill for settling German-American war claims.

Ahead of Schedule

Nearly tow days ahead of schedule, the Shipping Board steamer Blue Triangle of the American Export line is due to arrive in port this afternoon from Alexandria, Egypt.

Will Suit Settled

Springfield, April 29.—Litigation in the will controversy involving the $150,000 estate of Carrie H. Woodyard was ended, when the matter was settled out of court.

WIFE SAYS MATE HAS 2 DIVORCES

Horace G. Holt of Hartford, Ct., division engineer of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company, was not present today when his divorce case came up for the third time in Springfield.

A year ago Holt obtained a divorce in Lexington, but on appeal the Supreme Court ruled it invalid through its having been obtained in the wrong county. It was then assigned to Hampden County.

When the case came up today counsel for Mrs. Holt, whom he married eighteen years ago, declared that Holt had secured a divorce in Yucatan and had married Ann M. Casey of Holyoke in Florida.

The first Mrs. Holt will test the validity of the Yucatan divorce.

DOCTOR SUES 'DRY' CHIEF

Captain George A. Parker, federal prohibition director, is named as the defendant in a suit in equity filed in Federal District Court today by Dr James P. Roulier of Salem in which the doctor seeks a review of a revocation of his liquor prescription license by the prohibition head.

Dr. Roulier alleges that agents of Captain Parker suspended his right to issue liquor prescriptions on June 1, 1925, without a hearing, and that at a hearing on October 1, 1925, the permit was actually revoked.

He further alleges that at a rehearing on February 24 of this year the revocation was affirmed, although, according to Dr. Roulier, he has never been guilty of violation of the law governing issuance of liquor prescriptions.

Dr. Roulier asks the court either to modify Captain Parker's revocation or to vacate it.

N. E. GASOLINE SERVICE

The New England Oil Refining Company has purchased a substantial block of the stock of the Metropolitan Filling Stations, Inc., and henceforth all gasoline sold through the stations will be known as Mayflower Gasoline.

The combination of the Metropolitan stations with the Richdale Oil Company, Northeastern Oil Company, Mayflower Oil Company and other properties acquired by the New England Oil Refining Company, represents a substantial business enterprise in New England.

The plans of the company are to increase their distributing facilities and to build up an efficient public service organization. Under the new consolidation Mayflower filling stations will be located throughout Boston and suburbs as well as along the north and south shores. All gasoline sold will be the product of the New England Oil Refining Company and will come from their large refinery at Fall River, Mass.

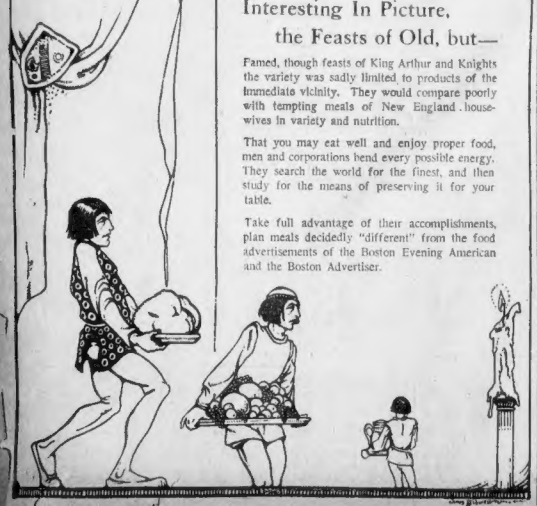
LETTER CAUSES ARREST OF MEXICAN BISHOP

Mexico City, April 29 (A.P.).—Dispatches report that Bishop Manguez Zarate of Hejuitla has been arrested by order of the district attorney of Pachuca City, in connection with a pastoral letter opposing the religious clauses of the Mexican constitution. The dispatches say it is believed the bishop will be released on bail. What amounts to virtually a state of war has been established at Zitacuaro as an outgrowth of the fighting between townspeople and the military, in which Captain Ruiz of the army and one civilian were killed and several civilians wounded. It is reported a large group of fanatical Indians on neighboring ranches intend to attack the town.

U. S. BUILDERS LAUNCH SUBMARINE FOR PERU

New London, Ct., April 29 (A.P.).—The first of two submarines for the Peruvian government, built under contract with the Electric Boat Company by the New London Ship and Engine Company, was launched from the plant of the latter in Groton today. It is designated the R-2, and with its sister craft, the R-1, represents, in the opinion of naval builders, the most advanced type of submersible in its class. The launching was witnessed by diplomats and naval representatives of several nations.

Variety of Food is the Spice of Life



Interesting In Picture, the Feasts of Old, but—

Famed, though feasts of King Arthur and Knights the variety was sadly limited to products of the immediate vicinity. They would compare poorly with tempting meals of New England housewives in variety and nutrition.

That you may eat well and enjoy proper food, men and corporations bend every possible energy. They search the world for the finest, and then study for the means of preserving it for your table.

Take full advantage of their accomplishments, plan meals decidedly "different" from the food advertisements of the Boston Evening American and the Boston Advertiser.

DEALERS everywhere tell us how eagerly you have seized upon Lux Toilet Form, you critical women.

"I just can't get enough," says one of the biggest buyers in the country. "My customers often buy it by the dozen and some of my charge customers get it by the case of 50 cakes."

"It sells so fast we are now ordering it in quantities unprecedented in our experience," a Fifth Avenue store tells us with satisfaction.

"It's a really big seller. In 15 years in business I've never seen a new product so instantly a success." Again and again we hear the same exhilarating story.

YES, there are all the marvels that you asked for! Satin-smoothness, such delicious firmness—true savon condensé that will wear and wear! Beguiling fragrance not too pronounced!

FULLER IS FIRST TO BUY ROSE IN BIG SALE

Taking time by the forelock, Gov. Fuller today made the first contribution to the Rose Day Sale which will take place next Saturday in Boston, Brookline and Cambridge for the welfare and hospital benefit fund of the Soldiers and Sailors Club of Boston.

Miss Sylvia Feibelman, who made the actual sale, was accompanied by Miss Corinne Main and Miss Anna Rossi the latter two in colonial costume, and in Mrs Richard D. Coe, co-chairman of the sales committee.

A beautiful silver trophy to be awarded to the Army and Navy Service Club in the aviator making the best record for safe flying at the East Boston Airport was exhibited. The flores are to aid in the sale.

NEW ENGLAND CROP SHORTAGE FEARED

Worcester April 29 (A.P.)—An inferior New England harvest in 1926 is feared because of the enforced delay in spring planting, which is already three weeks behind normal.

"Unless weather conditions improve materially at once" said George E. F. Story manager of the Worcester County Extension Service, "results will be disastrous to the grass crops in this section of the country."

Official reports from scattered New England points state that the soil still contains frost in many places in every State in New England and that there is an abundance of snow still to in the areas within 85 to 100 miles of the Canadian border and in the Berkshires.

JOHN F. A. GIBLIN IS DISBURSING AGENT

Confirmation by the authorities in Washington of the appointment of John F. A. Giblin, Boston Yankee Division veteran, as special disbursing agent in the regional office of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau in Boston was announced today by Captain William Blake, regional manager.

Giblin, who succeeds Rose White, will handle the payment of compensation, vocational training, insurance and other disbursements to war veterans and their dependents, as well as payment of the salaries of hundreds of government employes here.

MUSSOLINI IRON FIST UNSHAKEN BY BULLET

Rome, April 29 (A.P.). Fascism will continue to rule Italy with its iron hand, Premier Mussolini declared before a special session of the Chamber of Deputies today, devoted to thanksgiving ceremonies for his escape in the recent attempt on his life.

"In no case, or for no reason, will Fascism change its program Mussolini said. "Everything at this moment is prearranged. It should be known here and outside that Fascism will continue to rule the destiny of the Italian people with its iron hand."

The episode which occasioned this manifestation, he continued was merely distant in his instinct. Regarding it he was merely annoyed as if "stirred by an insane thing."

Remarking that he was fully aware of the risks he ran, he added

"I do not intend to segregate myself aside myself, or cut myself off from contact with the Fascist and the masses of the Italian people. In this moment there are preoccupations of another kind. In this connection, I can declare that all human lives are governed by irrevocable destinies."

HIGH SEAS HALT S51 SALVAGE

New London, Ct., April 29 (A.P.). Radio advices received at the submarine base today from salvage ships at the scene of the S51 disaster stated that rough weather had halted work.

The messages indicated nothing had been done since divers found the submersible, in about the same condition as she was when salvage operations ceased last December. The survey revealed that more sand had piled against her sides, but that the vessel had not shifted to any appreciable extent.

A rain storm and the tail end of a northeast gale swept the salvage ships, and although the weather had moderated somewhat seas were high today.

Captain E. J. King, commandant of the submarine base, who is in command of the salvage work, left the base on the tug Penobscot today for the scene of operations.

BAPTIST WOMEN ELECT MRS. F. L. ANDERSON

Mrs Frederick L. Anderson of Newton Center was elected president of the American Baptist Women's Foreign Mission Society at the annual convention of the New England district in Worcester today.

Mrs. Alton L. Miner of Boston was elected vice president, Miss Marion L. Clapp of Brookline, associate home vice president; Mrs. Frank C. Briggs of Newton Center, recording secretary; Mrs. N. C. Fetter of Cambridge, treasurer; Mrs. W. N. Hartshorn of Cambridge, Miss Marion Haskell of Newton Center, Ida Hunneren of Roxbury, Mrs. W. J. Phelps of Newton Centar, and Mrs. A. C. Walworth of Newton Center, members of the executive board. Miss Ada A. Brigham of Bennington, Vt., was elected foreign vice-president.

DR. EDWARD J. MEYER DIES IN SOMERVILLE

Dr. Edward J. Meyer for thirty years a practising physician in Somerville, died rather suddenly today at his home, No 21 Warren avenue that city. He was not feeling well yesterday and after making a few calls visited a Boston specialist. He passed away during the night. Dr. Meyer was born in Halifax, N. S., fifty-six years ago. He was a veteran of the World War, serving in France in a medical unit. He is survived by his sister, Mrs. C. L. Sullivan, and a brother, William P. Meyer, both of Somerville. The funeral will take place on Saturday morning.

WICKERSHAM GUARDIAN OF VANDERBILT BABY

New York, April 29 (A.P.).—Surrogate Foley today appointed George W. Wickersham, formerly attorney general of the United States, as general guardian of the property of Gloria Laura Morgan Vanderbilt, infant daughter of the late Reginald Vanderbilt. A bond of $3,000,000 was filed. This removes restrictions placed March 17, 1925, when Mr. Wickersham qualified without bond, but was not empowered to take into possession any property of the infant.

THIEVES STEAL 16 AUTOS IN BOSTON OVER NIGHT

Automobile thieves stole sixteen cars in Boston three in Cambridge and one in Revere during the night and early morning, most of those taken in the Hub being stolen in the Back Bay, Roxbury and the theatre district. Ten were found abandoned by the police.

3 ARE ACCUSED OF PROMOTING ANARCHY

Fall River, April 29.—Charged with promoting anarchy by distribution of a monthly newspaper called "The Fight" three Portuguese nationals were held in $1,000 bonds each in District Court today.

According to Federal officials an effort will be made to deport them. The three men, who are charged under the same law that brought Anton Orlando into court a few days ago, are alleged to be officers of the Boston, New Bedford, Fall River, Providence and Atlantic Federation of Portuguese Societies.

Four months' pay of a paper hanger has been promised and a married man's room of Dennis & Co. is recorded to the authorities who declared that funds for keeping the publication going were supplied constantly by several large mill organizations.

Action will be given a hearing on May 3. The arrests alleged officials declared, are a result of a drive by force of the government against anarchy and radicalism in this country.

Two of the men in the country 16 years and the other five 4 years each, all coming here from Lisbon, it was said. Immigration Bureau officials from Boston and Providence and local police inspectors arrested them.

PRESIDENT IS IGNORED ON RADIO BILL

Washington, April 29 (A.P.)—Ignoring President Coolidge's warning to Congress against establishing any more independent Federal agencies the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee today approved the White radio bill providing for a commission to have control of air communication.

The committee also proposed that the commission have five instead of three members, on salaries of $12,500 each.

The bill's proponents will seek to have it passed at this session stating that recent court decisions in a Chicago case have made immediate action imperative.

The White House disclosed recently that President Coolidge was inclined to favor a bill already passed by the House, placing the control of radio under the Commerce Department instead of an independent commission.

The commission would have supreme power in the field the committee has not considered a provision for appeals to the courts to compel the issuing of licenses which is present the resolving of them not had

The Letters of Queen Victoria

Human Appeal in Private Documents of Greatest Woman Ruler

Empress Eugenie—The machinations of the French court kept Europe on the ragged edge of war. Eugenie's consort, Napoleon III., is blamed by the English for the intrigue.

THE question of the defence of Canada, in view of a possible war with the United States, is agitating Queen Victoria and the statesmen of England.

With the fires of war rising higher daily in Europe, it seems as if the Empire will be involved also with the young nation overseas.

Today's installment of "The Letters of Queen Victoria," which the Boston Evening American is publishing daily with the full approbation of King George of England, shows the consensus of opinion is for peace, but the defence of Canada is demanded.

Lord Russell says the British government should act justly and impartially, no matter if it is said she is frightened by Federal successes against the Confederacy.

Published by permission of His Majesty King George V., through arrangement with Longmans, Green & Co. of New York. Copyright in Canada.

Urges Magnanimity

Queen Victoria to the Crown Princess of Prussia.

Windsor Castle, 8th July, 1864.—Let Prussia, who is master of the position, be magnanimous. She can be so now so easily; she has obtained all Germany wished, viz., the severance of the duchies from Denmark and their release from a yoke which had become so hateful to them.

Let Prussia also show that she does not mean to keep them for herself, and I believe all will come right. The shameful attacks against her grieve every right-minded person; and they have brought on the equally intemperate abuse of England in the German Press. But this will wear off.

You and I have but one common object, which was beloved Papa's, viz., the prospering of our two countries, and a good and friendly understanding between them. Let us, therefore, spare no pains to try and bring this about; and it is now in Prussia's power to do this.—V. R.

Darling's Misfortune"

Queen Victoria to the King of the Belgians

Osborne, 11th July, 1864.—The good news of the Danes wishing for peace at last, and of course on any terms they can get, is a great thing, and I trust will secure the tranquillity of Denmark, which the ill-usage and forced possession of the duchies never would or could. Prussia must only never take it for herself.

Dear little William (future Emperor William II. of Germany), Vicky's eldest boy, a sweet, darling, promising child, on whom my own darling dotes, and who had that misfortune with his poor little left arm, it is, who is come for sea bathing and change of air.

Oh! how it reminds me of three years ago, when we spent that last peaceful and happy (though much saddened by dear Mama's loss) Summer all together! And the dear l...

WANT A SILVER FOX? 3000 ARE TO BE SOLD

Lincoln, Me., April 29.—Nearly 3,000 silver foxes, involved in the Gordon Silver Fox ranches in which investors bought about $3,000,000 in stock, will be sold at auction Saturday morning.

The foxes will go on the auction block to reimburse temporary receivers and certain co-owners of the property for money which they spent or loaned temporarily. The auction is in accordance with a decree by Judge Charles J. Dunn.

The Gordon fox farm was investigated by federal officials in June, 1925, to determine whether there was a violation of postal laws.

Investigators found no violations. State officials investigating for a violation of the State's Blue Sky laws, also found the business legal. At that time it was said that more than 3,000 investors had subscribed more than $3,000,000 in fox contracts and shared in return as high as 75 per cent. The project was the plan of Dr. Frank H. Gordon of Bangor, Me., a dentist and newspaper publisher.

A split among investors developed last September and in October temporary receivers, P. H. Gillin and Artemus Weatherbee, were appointed by the court.

JOHN T. MAHAR TAKES BRIDE IN SOMERVILLE

Miss Mary Catherine Moore, daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. Peter Moore of No. 12 Aberdeen road, Somerville, became the bride of John Mahar of No. 88 L street, South Boston, in St. Catherine's Church, Spring Hill, Somerville.

The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. James J. O'Brien. Miss Eleanor A. Moore, a sister of the bride, was bridesmaid and James J. Mahar, brother of the groom, was best man. Following a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mahar left on a honeymoon trip to Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Washington.

MASTERS NIAGARA, BUT SLIP KILLS HIM

FATE PLAYS DAREDEVIL A SCURVY TRICK

By the strange irony of fate, Bobby Leach, famous daredevil, who safely negotiated Niagara Falls in a barrel, died today in Christ Church, New Zealand, as a result of slipping on an orange peel.

According to dispatches, the man who successfully braved the raging torrents of the Horseshoe Falls broke his leg when he slipped on the peel and complications set in following an amputation.

According to his sister, Mrs. Ed ward A. Ney of Fall River, Leach had been making a tour of the Antipodes.

ADRIFT TWO HOURS

"We had no direct news from my brother for about six weeks," said she. "At that time he was touring Australia, showing motion pictures based on his experience in going over Niagara Falls in a barrel. We had heard nothing of his trip to New Zealand."

Leach was one of the few persons who ever went over Niagara Falls and survived the experience. On July 25, 1911, he was placed in a specially constructed steel barrel which was shoved into the river at the Old Maid of the Mist landing.

The barrel tumbled through the rapids, sometimes being shot out of the water, and was swept into the middle of the pool, where it remained for two hours before swinging close enough to shore for watchers to salvage it.

FATE'S SCURVY TRICK.

Leach sustained a number of bruises and contusions, but no bones were broken, and although he was fifty years old, he apparently suffered no lasting injury.

In 1924 Leach announced he would go over the Falls in a big rubber ball, but the project was never carried out.

Friends feel that nature played an ironic joke on him in terminating his life by the most prosaic of accidents—a slip on the peel.

TEETH BEAT HIM.

Leach's last bid for notoriety was last Fall in Niagara Falls when he attempted to swim the lower river just below the falls.

He failed when he tried to recover his false teeth, which fell out, and was brought back to shore by a boat that had been following him. The feat was successfully accomplished a week or so later by William (Red) Hill, veteran Canadian riverman, causing Leach much chagrin.

With his wife and young daughter, Leach left in October and sailed from Vancouver for a twenty-nine weeks' vaudeville tour of Australia, New Zealand and South Africa.

PEEL BEATS FALLS AS DEATH AGENCY

BOBBY LEACH WHERE HE WON FAME

BLINDNESS THREATENS ACTOR JOE WEBER

New York, April 29.—On the eve of the fiftieth anniversary of his first stage appearance, Joe Weber, outstanding figure of the variety stage, is threatened with blindness and seeing an operation for the removal of cataracts that have completely veiled the sight of one eye and menaced the other.

He had suffered from similar troubles before, but had apparently mastered it last Fall when he last appeared in New York in vaudeville, and in December sailed for Europe for a much anticipated vacation trip.

The eye trouble interfered with the trip around the world that Mr. Weber and his wife had at last decided should take place. He had decided to leave the stage entirely and take up the important business of enjoying life.

Weber & Fields got their start in the show business under the late B. F. Keith playing Dutch comedy acts in Keith & Batcheller's Bijou Museum. They went on eight times a day in a Dutch kosher restaurant, along with some vaudeville.

The performers saved $ leased in the store and paid $6 a week to Mrs. Keith, who kept the money in ten cans they had from a little dairy lunch in the old Keith leiser shows them rated as far back as 1905 at $4,000 a week.

IDENTIFY YOUTH AS PURSE SNATCHER

Two Dorchester women today identified Alexander Ruzzi, twenty, of Grant avenue, Waverley, as the 2-gun bandit and snatcher who tore their handbags from their grasp on Bowdoin Hill avenue.

Police believe Ruzzi is the youth who took the handbags of several other women between Franklin Field and Matapan square on various days during the past six weeks, and some of these women will be asked to look at him.

He will be arraigned tomorrow morning in Dorchester court. Ruzzi was arrested as a suspicious person by Patrolman Edward J. Fitzpatrick of Mattapan police station.

RIPENING

THE poet says: "What we dream is the blossom; what we live is the fruit.

In youth all seems possible, each dream can come true, each ideal can be reached, each ambition fulfilled. All these dreams, illusions and hopes are so many flowering branches reaching up toward the heavens—beautiful, a glory of color and fragrance against a radiant blue Spring sky.

But blossoms fall; their span of life is short. Nature moves on; the seasons stand not still. The marvelous pink and white petals are scattered by the winds.

For a while the branches look naked, stripped, their illusive beauty gone. But by slow degrees tiny leaves come at the tops of the branches, spreading until all the boughs are covered. And half-hidden by the leaves is the fruit.

So do we live our lives.

Some of our dreams fail to be trodden under foot. Some of our illusions fly away on the wings of the wind, to return no more. But something remains—something always remains beneath the leaves—to be found. It may not have all the beauty and promise of the lovely blossom, but it is real and good, and with a fair chance it will grow, ripen and be ready to pick.

It sometimes takes a long while. Youth, with its beauty and hope, passes into middle age—often [illegible] and none too fruitful to the e.

There is so much striving, as so much disappointment. We look forward reluctantly to age. But we must not. Age is the time of full fruition if only we learn to live patiently and worthily.

We plant and we gather. We sow and we reap. And, finally, between our aging hands we hold the red-cheeked apple, the golden pear. Our work has brought us something. Our love returns through the love of our children. Our patient building, brick by brick, has become at last a home.

The young dream may have been more shining and more beautiful than the reality, as the blossom may be lovelier far than the fruit. But if only we will accept the changes and transformations as inevitable—Nature's way—and not regard them as disastrous or sad, we shall have much quiet happiness in our harvest years.

"Good morning, Mrs. Smith
this is Mr. Brown, of the S. S. Pierce Company"

THIS is the friendly greeting of one of our salespeople calling Mrs. Smith for her S. S. PIERCE order. It is the sort of courteous greeting which goes out every morning over the telephone wires from our new CENTRAL to hundreds of homes in the forty-seven cities and towns included in our delivery area.

Mr. Brown is acquainted with Mrs. Smith's needs, for she is one of his regular customers and through frequent contact with her home-planning problems, he is able to be of real service to her. His telephone call insures her against forgetting to give her order and frequently prevents her from being short of some article just when it may be most needed.

All of our telephone salespeople, like Mr. Brown, have their own list of customers, and take a personal interest in their orders. Similarly, the salespeople who receive calls have the same spirit of personal service.

Customers may have the convenience of a charge account by giving satisfactory references, or they may have their goods delivered C. O. D., small orders receiving the same personal attention as large ones. All the advantages of quality, variety, and service, are secured at no higher prices.

If you care to enjoy the advantages of S. S. PIERCE Service, we will be glad to place your name on our TELEPHONE ORDER list, if you will telephone us (Back Bay 7600 or Regent 1300), or mail the attached coupon.

WOMAN IS HURT BY "L" CAR

Mrs. Mary L. Cox, 65 years old, of No. 169 Buckminster road, Brookline, struck by an "L" surface car while crossing the street at Massachusetts station, Back Bay, with her daughter, Emeline Clark, was taken to the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital.

Her injuries are multiple body bruises, with possible leg fracture.

Elevated car No. 8148, while making the turn into the station from Boylston, sideswiped and knocked down Mrs. Cox. Her daughter, standing further away, escaped being hurt.

DUPED ROYALTY BOWED TO VALET POSING AS KING

Vienna, April 29 (A.P.).—Numerous important personages in Vienna are s ering whether years ago they made bows and murmured pledges of loyalty to Emperor Francis Joseph during private audiences or paid honors to his body servant, Eugene Ketterl, who resembled the Emperor-King strikingly.

The story of the valet who impersonated the monarch has come to light in a suit brought by Ketterl and other per onal attendants upon Francis Joseph against his heirs for standardized pensions. The suit has created a sensation.

Ketterl, it is alleged, not only impersonated his royal master at private audiences when the monarch was too busy to bother with such affai s, but always directed his master's dress and sometimes his official action. Thus, it is [illegible]ered, on his own initiative Ketterl presented Napoleon III. with the ring of the Duke of Reichstadt (Napoleon II.). On other occasions he took an active hand in carrying out affairs of the Emperor.

FARM RELIEF BILL WILL BE SPEEDED IN HOUSE

Washington, April 29 (A.P.)—With farm relief legislation given the right of way in the House, during next week, Representative Tilson, Republican floor leader, announced today that the judges' salary increase bill would be next in line for action. With that disposed of, the House will be asked to pass the $34,000,000 Rivers and Harbors Development bill.

ENGINE TOOTS FIRE ALARM

Gardner, April 29.—Fire practically ruined the building occupied by the Pierce Chesworth Machine Shop, Kendall Chair Manufacturing Company and Richard Olds, blacksmith, today, causing damage estimated at $15,000.

The engineer of a passing train first saw flames shooting from the roof of the building and sounded the railroad whistle alarm.

The firemen found the interior of the building a raging furnace. After a battle of several hours the firemen confined the blaze to that building.

Many have commented upon the excellent quality of piano music from the studio of WEAF. A short recital by Sally Caskin will be heard at 8:00 P. M. through WEEI.

NEW DETECTOR TUBE COMING

A new detector tube, UX-200-A, which is described as supersensitive, non-critical and economical in operation, and which will markedly increase the reception range of the average type of broadcast receiver, will soon make its introduction to radio set owners, experimenters and radio fans, according to an announcement made by Elmer H. Bucher, of the Radio Corporation of America.

"This tube may be used in any existing receiver operating on 5 six-volt storage battery," said Mr. Bucher, "and it will provide vastly increased sensitivity as well as output volume, with no changes or critical adjustments of any kind."

The UX-200-A radiotron answers the demand for a highly sensitive ultra-efficient battery detector tube so long desired by owners of storage battery sets, where quiet work is utmost efficiency in broadcast reception. Actual tests with typical receivers indicate the UX-200-A provides an increase in volume nearly equal to an additional radio frequency amplifier stage, without distortion or loss of tone quality. The sensitivity is likewise greatly increased.

Characteristics of UX-200-A radiotron detector.

Design, same as standard UX-201-A.

Base, same as standard UX-201-A.

Filament voltage, 5.

Filament current, .25 ampere.

Plate voltage, 45 maximum.

Plate current, 2 milliamperes.

Plate impedance, 28,800 ohms.

Grid leak, 2 megohms.

Grid condenser, .00025 microfarad.

So far as physical dimensions and base are concerned, the new detector tube is similar to the UX-200 and UX-201-A tubes. However, the new detector tube has characteristic appearance quite different from any other tube in stead of a plain or silvered bulb, the UX-200-A has a dull, smoky color due to the special gas content, but incidentally serving as a means of identification.

RADIOS TUNED IN AT COURT

Spectators in the Suffolk County Superior Criminal Court were regaled with music while they listened to the testimony in a $15,000 suit brought by the local agency against the American Radio and Research Corporation. It was the first instance that a radio concert was presented in the court house.

The plaintiff based its suit on breach of contract for failure to deliver 115 sets. Not satisfied with the quality of them, the sets were returned to the manufacturers.

To prove its case, Mr. Jefts, manager of the radio corporation set up one of the sets in the court room, with an indoor antenna, and tuned in one of the local stations. He then hooked up another set and picked up a different broadcast.

Weak Signals

Weak signals may be due to a defective tube or run down "B" batteries. If weak signals are due to a low "A" battery it always pays by having to subscribe the rheostat all the way over. This is also an indication of a poor tube, probably deteriorated by burning the filament too bright.

Protect Coils

Place a piece of paper over the windings of coils when soldering a connection which lies directly over or near the coils. This will prevent solder or soldering paste from entering on the windings. Many good circuits are sets are discarded just because the coils are damaged in the process of soldering.

Radio Queries

Q.—F. K., Charlestown. Please tell me through your column how I can improve a Raddola 5A. I would like to get more distance and volume and be able to cut out the local stations better. I have heard about UX tubes and wave traps. Will you please explain these things to me?

A.—I am sending you a little booklet which describes the method of changing your set over to UX tubes. With regard to the wave traps, the only way to determine how much one of these will help you is to try one out with your set. In most localities they are of considerable help with the IA receiver.

Q.—J. C., Watertown. Would you be good enough to let me know through your column in the Boston Evening American the best method of erecting an inside antenna and what to use. I have an unfinished attic which is about 50 feet high. I am on the first floor and will have to run it down the outside of the house. Will I get good results on such an antenna with a Standardyne set? It calls for a short inside antenna.

A.—It doesn't matter much what kind of wire you use for an inside antenna, so long as it is well insulated and of reasonably large capacity. My suggestion would be to take some ordinary lamp cord, untwist it, and run a single length once around the attic, suspending it on regular porcelain knobs such as the electricians use for wiring houses. In running it down the outside of the house use No. 14 rubber covered wire on the same kind of knobs. This sort of an antenna ought to work very well on your Standardyne set.

DODGE TO BROADCAST TALK ON MELODRAMA

Tonight at nine o'clock WNAC, The Shepard Stores, have scheduled a most interesting talk to be given by Wendell Phillips Dodge. He will talk of the great melodrama, "The Two Orphans" which comes to the Boston Opera House next Monday, with a two-star cast—and by the way, eight of these twelve stars are already scheduled to talk from WNAC during the week of the engagement.

Mr. Dodge will be particularly interesting because of his vast theatrical experience, and the fact that he is an authority on the drama—particularly in the case of old plays and classics.

RADIO CONTEST OPEN TO ALL

Who is your favorite radio artist?

Of course you must have at some time or other expressed your preference in this respect when listening in on the various programs sent through the air.

Here is an opportunity for every one to vote in the Radio Popularity Contest. Do so today—and again tomorrow and the day after if you feel so disposed. In fact for that matter you may cast as many votes as you desire. The contest is open until midnight, Saturday, May 7. Your vote may elect your choice as the most popular entertainer, who will be given a week's engagement at Loew's State Theatre at a substantial salary. This arrangement has been made by the Boston Evening American with Manager Joseph H. Brennan of Loew's State Theatre.

Since the announcement of the contest there has been a steady stream of votes, which gives every indication that it has met with the decided approbation of the radio fans throughout Boston and neighboring vicinity. It is a simple expedient. Merely clip out and fill the ballot on this page and mail to the Radio Contest Editor of the Boston Evening American.

The lucky winner in this contest will appear in conjunction with Philip Spitalny and his Recording Jazz Unit, which is one of the delightful features of the weekly programs at this capacious Back Bay theatre.

Mr. Spitalny is keenly enthusiastic over the contest and has expressed his cheerful willingness to assist in every way possible.

N. E. ROAD MAP FOR TOURISTS

An authoritative guide to the Highway Number System in New England with a letter of welcome to the New England tourist by President Roland W. Boyden of the Boston Chamber of Commerce was issued today by the Chamber's Committee on New England Affairs.

The book, prepared with the assistance of the six highway commissioners and State librarians of New England and the United States Canadian government authorities, contains a map of New England showing both the United States and State routes. On the printed list of official communities of interest to the tourist will be found a number of such historic spots that might be...

MAY YOHE SUIT SETTLED

Keene, N. H., April 29—The $3,500 suit which May Yohe, once famous actress, now a resident of Boston, brought against two fire insurance companies to recover for loss on the Blue Diamond Inn at Marlow, N. H., was brought to a sudden termination when it was announced a settlement had been effected out of court.

Miss Yohe and her husband had been in the inn on its last night when it burned. Their loss was more than $4,500.

No official announcement was made of the terms of the settlement, but it was rumored that the actress will receive a support annuity of $1,500.

Goldwyn Buys 3 Plays for Popular Stars

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS,
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Los Angeles, April 28.—The screen romance of Ronald Colman and Vilma Banky will not be interrupted for more than a year.

With the purchase of The Masked Bride, Prince Lazarieff and Beau Geste, Goldwyn has three plays waiting for this popular pair, and he is determined that neither the power of money nor the influence of friendship will persuade him to separate the...

Ronald Colman

again.

In other words Sam has his weather eye on the box office when it comes to giving preference for Vilma and Ronald.

"The Vagabond Prince" was born like one would say "Bang Harlequin" and is by Rudolf Lothar, author of "The Were Wolf" and "The Duchess Eva" when reading me the title came up for discussion at a dinner party the other night some of the guests including only a limited number of people knew the definition of "Harlequin" and the rest insisting that anyone with an average education could both spell and explain Harlequin.

The Vagabond Prince will run as the title and it will be directed by Henry King as soon as he finishes "The Winning of Barbara Worth," which is the first picture to star Vilma and Ronald. Later Frank Lloyd will direct "Beauty and the Beast," scheduled as their second picture.

One more Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Program picture and then Ramon Novarro is going to be permitted to have the desire of his heart — the chance to bring "Fieldelberg" to the screen. I saw Ramon at the M. G. M. studios yesterday day clutching a clipping with Kathryn Williamson's picture. She is the girl who he was supposed to have taken out a license to wed on April 1, although he says he has never seen her.

Ramon Novarro

"Pretty, isn't she," he asked me passing me her picture.

I suggested he ought to give her a chance to play in his next picture which may be "Ninety-Six Hours Leave," with Robert Florey as director. "A Certain Young Man" has been served upon by all concerned as the title for "Romance," which he has just finished.

Pauline Frederick in one scene who knows her own mind. "The Price," by Frederick Isham was purchased for her by Emboss some inspired soul thought "A Love in Heaven" would be a far more effective title.

Pauline Frederick

"That may be all right," said Miss Frederick, "but not for me."

After winning that argument she was all set for the second round. She wants Hobart Herbert for her leading man. Yes, and I'll bet Frank O'Connor will direct her in "The Price" which incidentally will be her first picture under her new contract.

Helen Costello, sister of Dolores, is going to have a chance. Jack Warner believes that all she needs is a change of personality, and how do you think he achieved that most difficult thing. He had her bob her hair which created an unbelievable change in the young lady.

He is going to give her the leading role in a forthcoming Warner Brothers' production where we will all have a chance to see just how much an actress can be changed by a haircut.

Pacing the First National players these next few weeks until the plant at Burbank is ready for occupancy will find them scattered about at several studios. Yesterday M. C. Levee and John McCormick did a little skirmishing about and beat out existing space at the Fine Arts studios. In fact, I believe they did more, they leased space at the studios so that Owen Moore, Anna Q. Nilsson and Lewis Stone would have a place to work. Rather important with "Delicatessen" and "Collusion" about to be put into production. One of the other First National companies is stationed at the Metropolitan studios.

The other evening Charlie Chaplin took Mrs. Chaplin to the theatre, her first appearance in public since the birth of the new baby.

A woman approached the Chaplins and put a folded piece of paper in Mr. Chaplin's hand. He did not read it until he got home and then learned that he and Mrs. Chaplin had been made members of some club. The next day the woman telephoned and said:

"Oh, by the way, Mr. Chaplin, I am so glad that you accepted membership in our club. I have put you on the board of directors."

Charlie Chaplin

While we are on the subject of the new Chaplin baby, I mentioned to Sydney how nice it was that he had a namesake.

He said, "I guess it can't be such a good baby."

By the by, Sydney Chaplin's makeup as "Old Bill" is the most complete disguise I have ever seen. Recognize him if you can!

Sydney Chaplin

When Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer signed Harry D'Arrast to direct a picture, they reckoned his association with Charlie Chaplin as assistant director would give him a pretty good slant on comedy. Apparently Harry Rapf, who is in charge of the D'Arrast unit knew what he was doing, for after hearing the story of "The Prodigal Daughter" I am willing to wager it will be full of good situations.

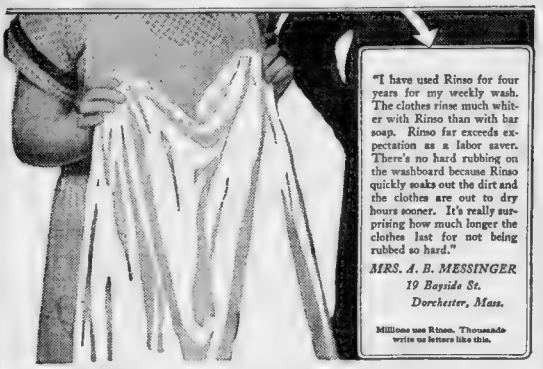
What Mrs. Agnes Messinger, Dorchester, says:



"I have used Rinso for four years for my weekly wash. The clothes rinse much whiter with Rinso than with bar soap. Rinso far exceeds expectation as a labor saver. There's no hard rubbing on the washboard because Rinso quickly soaks out the dirt and the clothes are out to dry hours sooner. It's really surprising how much longer the clothes last for not being rubbed so hard."

MRS. A. B. MESSINGER
19 Bayside St.
Dorchester, Mass.

Millions use Rinso. Thousands write us letters like this.

Millions of women get a whiter wash
—this safe "no-work" way

THE news is too good to keep. One neighbor tells another.

"No more hard rubbing for me! See how white and clean my wash is this week—and all I did was soak and rinse!"

Millions are saying it. Thousands have written to tell us. Read above what one of many right around here says.

Goodbye washboard!

Already these millions have given up washboards for good. Now the whole family wash the quick way, the easy way—the wonderful soak-and-rinse way!

They just put the whole wash to soak in Rinso suds. The ground-in dirt and stains loosen and float off in the water.

Then they rinse—and the wash comes out whiter, brighter than hours of hard rubbing could get it!

The most grimy hems and edges need only a gentle rub between the fingers to make them snowy.

What is Rinso?

Rinso is an amazing new kind of laundry soap—granulated.

So safe you could soak your finest white table cloth in it for days without harm.

Wonderfully easy on hands — never again will they look red and washworn.

Contains no acids, bleaches or harmful chemicals.

Clothes last longer

Clothes last longer with Rinso. It's so gentle. Then, too, it saves rubbing the clothes threadbare against a board.

Rinso whitens better than boiling—and sterilizes, too!

Try it this week. Get Rinso from your grocer; follow easy directions on package.

Best in washers

If you use a washer, by all means try Rinso. You'll be delighted! Recommended by makers of 27 leading washing machines.

LENGLEN BANS TENNIS PLAY IN AMERICA

Rome, April 29 (A.P.)—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French lawn tennis star, who is visiting Italy, today denied that she had any intention of going to America.

When asked concerning the agreement to have been reached calling for her appearance in the United States, she said:

I haven't the slightest intention of going to America or playing ... matches in America. I play for my own pleasure, and am completely free to do so when and where I desire.

This is merely another one of the canards launched by the ... sensational sporting writers in the United States, who seem to take pleasure in inventing all kinds of ... and untrue things about me, cooling up matrimonial prospects and similar nonsense every week. Why they do it is a mystery to me.

COUNTRY CLUB WOMEN DOWN BRAE-BURN

By BILL GRIMES.

In a close, hard-fought match, the Country Club team of the W. E. A. defeated the Brae Burn team today at the Country Club links, 5 and 4. This victory holds the Country Club in first place, with four matches won and only one defeat. The feature match of today's play was the 21-hole battle between Mrs. E. W. Roope and Mrs. R. W. Knowles.

Mrs. Roope was 4 up at the seventh hole, but Mrs. Knowles won the next four holes, squaring the match, and was 1 up going into the fifteenth. Mrs. Roope won the sixteenth, but Mrs. Knowles came back and won the seventeenth, and from then until the twenty-first, halved the holes. On the twenty first, Mrs. Roope holed a 30 foot putt, which gave her the match.

Grenna-McPherson to Clash in Semi-Final; Stasiak Tackles Labriola

Tonight's Card

Strangler Lewis, holder of the world's title belt, vs. Ned McGuire, Irish heavyweight, best two falls out of three to a finish.

Stanley Stasiak, Polish champion, vs. Leone Labriola, Italy, one fall to win.

Rough House Williams vs. Bill Rudy, one fall to win

By JACK CONWAY

FLAMING Youth represented by Ned McGuire, a try to wreck the wrestling career of Strangler Lewis, torch bearer for Old Man Experience, at Paul Bowser's big wrestling show at the Boston Arena tonight.

McGuire and Lewis will battle until one of these famous rivals has had his shoulders pushed to the canvas twice.

It should be a bitter, furious conflict between Experience and the old days of the mat.

McGuire and Lewis have already battled for supremacy on two occasions without the result being decisive. In their first meeting, McGuire won a one-hour handicap match when the Strangler failed to count with a fall

McGuire's warm Celtic blood was then stirred up by Billy Sandow's caustic coaching methods. Ned forgot about the Strangler and made a lunge for Sandow. As he did, Lewis clamped on what McGuire claimed was a strangle hold and which Ed maintained was a headlock. There was then some fierce clawing on the mat, after which McGuire pulled his right arm free and hit Lewis flush on the jaw with a Dempsey punch. The Strangler went completely out of the picture and was awarded the bout and a fall.

THE semi-final bout will bring together Raffael Grenna, Italian heavyweight champion, and Jack McPherson, Scottish champion. This will be a one fall match to a finish. Grenna has been winning steadily, while McPherson proved his class when he won a fall over Lewis at the Grand Opera House last Fall.

Stanley Stasiak, lion of Poland, and Leone Labriola, Italian heavyweight, will furnish the thrills in a one fall match to win.

Rough House Williams and Billy Rudy will open the show open.

Leon Burbank will be master of ceremonies in the ring.

ENTRIES POUR IN FOR SHOE CITY RACE

By STED CHANDLER

Entries are piling in for the second annual 10 mile road race of the Lynn Italian A. A. which is to be held in that city May 8. Fifty three names are now in and many more ar expected

Manager Cirdaro, however wishes it made known that he has no entry blanks, and that runners wishing to compete send send in their name and registration number to him at 30 Witt street West Lynn. This has not been generally known and some confusion and hat trick has resulted from prospective entrants writing in for blanks

The stars who will run include Clarence De Mar who finished this year, and Edward Hayes, winner of the Cohasset 20 foot race are also entered.

The committee in charge with and the names Gus Barbato, member of the Cathedral A M C A race preparations for the race, as prizes, several cups and a even gold watches Humbert Cirdaro, president; Alfred Vacci secretary, and Nick Scala, treasurer.

The entries received to date are Clarence H. De Mar Melrose Post 90, A L, James Henigan, unattached; Gus Barbato, Stoughton Civic A. A. CARROLL MAKES GOOD WITH TORONTO CLUB

Owen Carroll, formerly of Holy Cross, has proved to Ty Cobb that he is ready to become a major leaguer. Ownie, who was farmed out to the Toronto Club for experience, has won three consecutive games, and on each start he has looked the goods. With this Detroit Tigers now in a bad slump, the Georgia Peach will probably recall Carroll very soon.

FIGHTS I CAN'T FORGET

by—TAD—America's Greatest Boxing Authority

THIS is the thirty-first of a series of famous fights covered by Tad, the greatest sporting cartoonist and leading authority on pugilism in the county. Tad has covered all the big fights held in this country for the past thirty years.

Burke Whaled McSherry

THERE came near being a fatal ending to what was called the STAR bout at the old National Club when Sailor Burke knocked out Jim McSherry in one round.

For fully fifteen minutes after being packed out of the ring McSherry lay on the floor of the clubhouse unconscious, with doctors and handlers working over him like Trojans.

It was just luck that saved the National Club from killing boxing in New York at the time

It was the poorest match made in the East since Herr Fiedler was signed up to meet Kid McCoy.

A local newspaper man covered MacSherry, who worked in a law office and induced him as the man to take the laurels from Johnson. The National Club, without even giving the embryo lawyer a try-out, put him on in a main event

The boss agents of the club announced that Tom Kennedy, the actor, a heavy star of those days had tried the coming champ out and found him to be a sorry loser. The managers of the club, of course, expecting to see a second Jim Corbett, paid Pell dues and went into the business

INSTEAD of a boxing match they saw a slaughter. They saw a man who knew nothing about boxing go up against a terrific hitter and get knocked down half a minute after the gong had sounded. They saw MacSherry on the floor as stiff as a board, with a lump on his eye the size of an ostrich egg. They saw him get up and reel and go down again from another terrific belt. They saw him try to get up on the ropes, they saw him fall back and the referee, Jim Buckley, who should have stopped the contest to avoid a fatal ending, help him to his feet.

They saw MacSherry reel blindly about and receive another box which would have felled an ox. They saw him fall back, striking the boards with terrific force. THEN, only then, did the referee wave the other aside. No, they didn't know whether the fallen man was dead or alive, they saw the referee stop the bout.

The members saw four husky men carry the unconscious man from the ring while the gallant tar jumped fifteen feet in the air, squealing like an Indian because he had trimmed a spieler. The members looked at one another with expressions of disgust. THAT was what the swell club had handed them in the line of a championship.

The members yelled, "Stop the fight," when MacSherry went down the first time. He was licked then. He had no more chance than a crippled child. No, there must be a killing. It must be to a finish. MacSherry was game—why not let's see if he can do game? They went to the limit

And what a picture Sailor Burke was! The Sailor who backed all around the ring when Billy Papke faced him. The Sailor who took the count twenty-two times when he fought Jack Johnson at Bridgeport. That game, willing sailor. What a picture he was! Oh, how pretty he looked.

What a confident smile he wore and how like a tiger he tore after the poor, bleeding MacSherry when the latter couldn't hold his hands up. What a terror he was! How he measured his man and dropped him cold, and like a panther sprung at him as soon as he regained his feet.

OH, the brave sailor! What a contrast it was to the night he fought Billy Papke, when the Illinois Thunderbolt could fight and wasn't afraid to swap punches.

There was no smile upon the Sailor's face that night. He had a fighter before him, a fellow who waded in and slugged him every inch of the way

But that's the way with some bruisers. Why didn't Burke step back when he saw MacSherry reeling blindly and ask the referee to stop the bout?

Young Corbett did it when he had Eddie Hanlon beaten to a pulp.

Every one in the house knew that the "coming champion" was beaten. They had seen enough. It was simply disgusting the lack of common sense shown there.

The preliminary before the main event was another crime. Tommy Moran, a poor, fat rummy, who had a stomach on him like a prize porker, was pitted against Jeff O'Connell. One good punch might have sent him to the hospital, but after a few rounds the pair were taken off. Moran was so groggy that he could barely stand. The members simply hooted that affair to a finish.

We can see boxing matches with a great deal of delight when two good boys are boxing, but when they dig up dead ones and coming champions who have never had a real tryout—well, good-night.

SUGGS PASSES UP GO WITH ROSENBERG

David Lumiansky, manager of Chick Suggs, has notified the New York Boxing Commission that he has abandoned his plan to sign the New Bedford boxer for a bout with Phil Rosenberg, world's bantamweight champion, at Cleveland. The commission had previously informed Lumiansky that Suggs and himself would be suspended if the match was arranged.

JACK'S AND MARGARET'S BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

A TRUE STORY FROM LIFE—BUDGET No. 38

By MARTHA LEE

Today I want to tell you an honest-to-goodness true story built on budget.

Six years ago Jack who had saved $2,000, married Margaret. The $2,000 was to be kept towards the purchase of a home later. Margaret had been in business for five years and insisted on her savings being used to furnish a small apartment in which they were to start housekeeping.

Jack earned $126 a month in a small but growing manufacturing plant in their own home town, but was hoping for a better position at city headquarters within a year. They agreed that they would live within their yearly income, putting their theories of keeping on a budget basis and showing a savings, however small, at the end of the year.

First they rented a five-room flat on a side street which they were able to get for $20 a month without heat. This being less than one-fifth of their income, was within the proper proportion.

During that first year their monthly budget looked like this: $18 life insurance; $88 for food (this was liberal as Margaret could not be expected to have experience to market to the best advantage at first); Rent $20, heating $15 the clothing on hand was sufficient for a large part of their first year), operating $14, personal (for amusement) $12

Since operating is one of the budgeteer's first snags, you may be interested in just how that $15 a month was spread over the year. Three tons of stove coal at $18—$46; 4 tons of furnace coal at $16—$60; kindling $1; electricity $30; outside help for Spring and Fall cleaning, $10; cleaning supplies $20; fire insurance $8; total for the year, $178. Divided by 12—$14.83 monthly. (There was no gas in the first home.)

Personal totalled during the year, magazines $5; newspapers, $4.20; Sunday newspapers, $6.50; recreation (one movie a week) $5 cents—$24; for health, $24; church dues, $36; personal up-keep (40 cents a week each), $41.60; gifts $8, making $146 for the year. Divided by 12, $13 monthly.

Watch this page for the second chapter of Jack and Margaret's story. Many of their problems you'll find are your problems.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

First, thank you, G. J. K., for your letter. It is so encouraging to know that the budget system is working well and that you are "delighted." The second sheet is going away to you for your friend.

Mrs. J. G.'s husband earns $36 a week; she earns $25 and from a roomer they receive $7, making $68 weekly.

Monthly expenses are: Rent $42, gas $2.50, electricity $3.50, telephone $3.25, laundry $4, food $56, making $110.25 per month; coal $43 a year, insurance $44 a year, $5 a week on stock. She asks what spending money she and her husband can afford and what allowance for clothing.

The Standard Budget allows you $14 for shelter each week, including business carfares, food, $18.50 including all meals outside the home, clothing $7.00, operating $10.50, saving $7, and personal, including all other expenses $11.50. Your spending money will depend on how much must come out of your personal fund. This includes, you know, doctor's and dentist's bills, all recreation, vacations, church and club dues, candy and tobacco, and everything in the luxury class. I am sure you can adjust these figures to meet your special needs.

Mrs. F. J. F. has $20 a week income. The family consists of two adults and three children. Rent is $8.50 weekly; insurance $2 weekly and $6 every 3 months, $7.50 weekly furniture payments are $1.25 to $1.75 a month.

She says: "Hubby gets paid on Thursdays and with buying food, bag wood, and buy coke and paying the bills there isn't much left by Saturday night."

The usual $20 budget allows $4 for shelter and husband's business carfares, $6 for food, $2 for clothing, $3 for operating, including heat and light, $5 for savings, including insurance, and $3 for personal which must include all other expenses and the furniture bill.

Of course you will have to have more than $6 for food. Your weekly insurance takes care of your furniture allotment with nothing left for the $6 policy every 3 months. The $5.00 out of personal is only $2. With gas, coke and wood taking all of $3 a week it is hard to know where you can save for extra money for that food allowance. Then there are the lodge dues and school book bills you mention to come out of the personal allotment.

Can't you have your furniture payments reduced to $1 a week? And I wish as much you could save enough this Summer to get away from the necessity of buying wood and coke by the bag. It's so terribly expensive this way. A letter like yours always makes me hate because you are spending more than your income and I defy anyone to show you where to save.

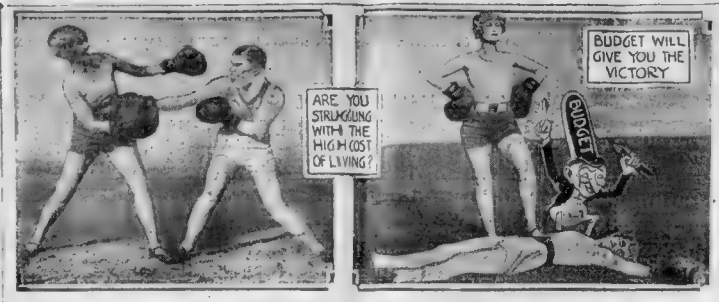
Mrs. A. L. H. has $44 weekly. There are four in the family, (2 adults and 2 children). Rent $18, insurance $2.75, $3.50 weekly on furniture, $4 on another small bill and $5 for a budget. This is more hopeful. Try saving $4.50, including insurance, rent $6, (including business carfares), food $12.50, clothing $7 and operating, heat and light $5, personal $10, (including payments on furniture and other bill)

Mrs. M. E. E. writes that she is going to be married in the near future and will work for a while, the combined incomes being $53. For her thaw will pay $15 weekly, $5 for [illegible] and [illegible].

She says she cannot save anything on her present income of $20 with a board, but wants to go to housekeeping in a year's time and wants to know if they can afford a car with only $300 in the bank at present.

The future should be rosy for you, my dear, and I am glad you are going to start on a firm budget basis. I am going to make the savings very high, for that new home. I think you can easily save $15 a week, allowing $7.50 a week for clothes (you will not need anywhere near this amount at first), operating $5, includes all service such as shoe shines, waves, manicures, laundry, telephone etc.; personal $10, out of which you can save at least $5 for a furniture fund. Don't you really think it would be wise to buy your home and furnish it and then budget for the automobile, rather than indulge in the car now and let it eat up the money that could otherwise be used to establish that most precious of all things—a home?

You know expert statisticians say that the minimum cost of maintaining a flivver including everything, is $20 a month and this would have to come out of your personal fund. With this budget the flivver will easily come a little later and the home will be an assured fact.



Budget will help K. O. High Cost of Living.

Making of a Husband

By Ann Lisle

I FELT that I had betrayed [illegible] reading this letter I had no [illegible] to see the words he had [illegible] and then longed to deny. But [illegible] down in my heart I wandered if I was not glad to know what [illegible] be paid me when he was [illegible] too weak to control his thought.

Then a new fear assailed me. [illegible] letter in my feet.

Jim had gone into the living room—straight into the living room. Ralph's letter is there. It lay open where I had dropped it when the telephone summoned me to the floor, perhaps. Or on the table. I didn't know where it had fallen. But Jim could hardly have missed it. Jim must have seen Ralph's letter.

If Ralph's first sane thought was to send me a rude message begging me not to read his letter, what would he pay to the idea of having Jim read his heart's secrets—read and resent them?

"Jim," I called as I hurried down the hall after recovering from my amazement at the letter—and the impulse bidding me not to read it "Jim!

There was no answer. "How did Ralph get word to me just today?" I asked myself dimly. "Why just today? Why was it too late" I had no right to read this letter, Jim——"

But I had. My feet carried me into the living room. Jim was not there. His hat and coat were there, in the hall. He knew what was right of him. Had it not been for his hat and coat, I might have thought that my eyes had deceived me and that he had not come into the house. But here was evidence. I went over to Ralph's letter. The envelope [illegible] there—where I had left it. But the letter was not on the table, nor on the floor by my chair.

"Jim has read it. He has taken it! What shall I do?" I asked myself desperately and in sore affright.

Bitterness surged up into my heart. I could not judge Jim kindly in this black moment. I was [illegible] by emotions. Ralph and Jim seemed to dance before my eyes like phantoms. I could almost hear them asking me to choose—to decide what I was going to do. I looked up and saw Kitty Firkin pattering into the room. Behind her came Jim. His face was white—[illegible] streaked with soot

"I went down to the furnace," he said

"You burned my letter!" I accused.

[illegible] lieving that it is less likely than many suppose that the United States will, when their war is over, attack Canada, but he thought Canada can be defended, and must be defended, and said that there is no intention to withdraw the British troops.

Queen Victoria's Correspondence Shows Great Agitation

child remembers his dear grandpapa!

Queen Victoria to Earl Russell,
WINDSOR CASTLE, Feb. 1, 1863.—The Queen would ask Lord Russell whether, having done all [illegible] legally can do to prevent the [illegible] of which the Foreign Government certainly have just cause to complain, it will not seem (particularly after the language towards England used by Mr. Seward himself) that we are seeking now to defend ourselves from any complicity in such acts in a somewhat undignified manner,

It will surely be ascribed in the United States to the fear created in England by the late successes of the Federal armies.

The Queen must, therefore, before she gives her consent to the proposed communication to the Confederates being made through the Federal Government, it seems to her not only unnecessarily offensive towards the Confederates, but to place her own Government in the humiliating position of appearing still further to be acting under the dictation of a Government which has not been sparing in the use of insulting and threatening language.

Lord Russell's reply to Queen Victoria.

87 Chesham Place, 5th Feb., 1863.—Lord Russell entreats your Majesty to consider the situation in which the Government has been for some time placed.

Your Majesty proclaims neutrality and enjoins your subjects to conform themselves to neutral obligations.

In place of this Messrs. Laird, builders of the Confederate cruiser Alabama, and others conspire to break the law, and to assist the Confederates in their warlike operations. Their contempt of your Majesty's authority, and their attempts, whether from love of gain or passion for war, to disobey and contravene orders issued in conformity with law, are equally notorious.

Mr. Canning once said that he hoped this country would never "sneak" into a war. Lord Russell has the same feeling. But ship after ship has been built or bought in your Majesty's ports with a view to force the country "to sneak into a war."

Feeling humiliated and outraged by these proceedings, Lord Russell prepared the letter to Messrs. Mason, Slidell, and Mann, which your Majesty has seen.

When it was considered and approved by the Cabinet, the Lord Chancellor suggested that a copy should be given to the United States Government, who could at once communicate it at Richmond.

Of course Mr. Seward will suppose, as he does upon every occasion when your Majesty's Government acts in a manner which he likes, that the British Government is afraid.

But the question is, ought your Majesty's Government to refuse to do right, to refuse to act in a manner which is just and honorable, because a swaggering and insolent men will say that Great Britain is frightened by the successes of the Federal Government?

Lord Russell avows that he thinks the British Government ought to act a just, impartial and honorable part, whatever may be the motives to which her conduct may be attributed.

To bring on this country the calamities of war, not because we have a good cause, but because we do not like to be thought afraid, would be a course [illegible] Lordly dignity, the power, or the humanity of this country.

Viscount Palmerston, Prime Minister, to Queen Victoria.

94 Piccadilly, 13th March, 1865.—Viscount Palmerston presents his humble duty to your Majesty, and begs to state that there has been [illegible] quite a lively discussion about the defence of Canada, and the relations of England and the United States. Mr. Seymour Fitzgerald called the attention of the House to the subject. His object was to show that Canada is at present defenceless, that war with the United States is probable, and that the Government ought long ago to have taken measures for Canadian defence.

Lord Robert Cecil feared that the English Government would leave Canada to her fate as they had Denmark, and contended that Canada ought to be defended. Mr. Bright made a long and certainly able speech in praise of the American Republic and the Federal cause, urging the maintenance of peace. Viscount Palmerston agreed in wishing for peace, and in be-

GREETINGS everybody!

In reading the rules and regulations for the kiddies' diet, it often seems to me that too much emphasis is placed on the foods they ought not to eat and not quite enough on foods they really need. The objections to pies and fried foods and sweets are not only because they do cause digestive troubles in small tummies, but also because they use up the space that ought to be occupied by the more desirable foods.

Here are just a few very simple suggestions for menus easily prepared, with sufficient variety, and unless the child's appetite has been spoiled through injudious coddling, every item on these menus will taste good.

Old fashioned bread and milk is not to be despised for the supper dish of little children. If the milk is not very creamy, spread the bread with butter. Use well baked bread at least a day old or toast, or sometimes crackers. This constituted all my own suppers from June 15 to September 14 for four years, from the time I was eight until I was twelve. Big pilot crackers varied the bread, with sometimes a sprinkling of blueberries.

African Locusts Grow Large

IN certain parts of Africa the locusts are said by explorers to grow to an extraordinary size. In some places, it is reported, they attain the length of four inches, and eat many as their ordinary food.

This Day in History

THIS is the anniversary of the triumphant entry of Joan of Arc into Orleans in 1429. The maid had defeated the British and preserved the kingship of France. She was burned at the stake in 1431.

The Thrilling Love Story of a Boston Girl and the Husband Who Strayed

CHAPTER LV

Copyright, 1928, Fabacon Features, Inc.

HE was coming! That surely must mean that the storm had blown over. He was coming to take her home! He was coming to explain how he had happened to have Babe Delano in his arms last night.

Sylvia was sure of it. She could have laughed out loud for sheer relief. Her spirits rose like a lark at break of day.

Under Aunt Agony's watching eyes, her face flushed and bloomed like a rose, with her sudden happiness. Her eyes danced like blue-black water in the sun. One hand went to her breast, where her heart was throbbing under her soft muslin nightgown, as only the thought of Ranny could make it throb.

"Well, I'd better hop out of this bed and get dressed!" she cried. "Is there some fresh coffee? Ranny likes it strong, and I'll bustle down and make him some French toast."

She jumped up from the bed, and hugged Aunt Agony and kissed her leathery cheek.

She took a fresh blue dress out of her bag. It was one that Ranny loved.

She sprayed perfume on it, and on her dark, cloudy hair.

Aunt Agony took it all in with grim eyes.

"Fixing yourself all up for him, eh, girl?" she asked with sharp sarcasm. "Last night you were going to leave him and now you're all to welcome him with open arms. The way he winds you around little finger does beat all."

Sylvia later found her at the breakfast table with one eye on the newspaper and the other on the doings of Joy street, outside the window.

"So, just went into her mother's room," she said, nodding in the direction of the Shirleys' big house. "She's getting thin, isn't she? And that husband of hers! You can hardly waddle."

Aunt Agony hadn't lifted a finger in getting Ranny a bite of breakfast.

She Welcomes Ranny

"There's everything you need on the kitchen shelves," she said, not looking at her. "If you want to cook a meal for that good-for-nothing you can, but I won't, and I'm right here to tell you so. He ought to be tarred and feathered and ridden out of town on a pole, that one. He's just as bad as he can be," Sylvia came back to the table for a minute.

"Now, Aunt Agony, if you say another word against Ranny, I'll walk out of the house," she warned her. "I'm sorry I told you what happened last night. I should have known that Ranny didn't mean anything by it. Way down deep in his heart he doesn't care for anyone but me, and I ought to remember that better than I do. I ought to trust him."

"Bosh!" Aunt Agony broke in, her upper lip twitching with anger. "You ought to trust him! You ought to have him watched by a detective for a while. Then you wouldn't trust him as much as you do, now—"

She stopped talking, suddenly, as if she had said too much already, and went on reading.

But as Sylvia measured coffee into the pot, and mixed up the milk and eggs for the French toast, she wondered what Aunt Agony meant.

Were there things about Ranny that he kept hidden from her? Things that Aunt Agony had found out? Could that be possible?

Oh, no! She wouldn't let doubts of Ranny creep into her mind.

When the coffee was made, she carried it into the dining room. The French toast went into the oven to keep hot.

While she was upstairs packing up her bags, and laying the baby's blanket and bonnet on the bed, Ranny rang the front door bell.

"I'll let him in. I'll let him in," she called eagerly to Aunt Agony, and ran down the stairs. She might have saved her breath. For Aunt Agony made no move to go to the door. As far as she was concerned, Ranny might have stood there for ever, before she'd let him in.

"Breakfast's all ready for you, Mr. Man," Sylvia cried, fairly shining with excitement and welcome as she flung the door wide open to him.

Then something in his face stopped her.

He was looking through the door of the dining room at the coffee tray she had made ready for him, and then at Aunt Agony, sitting like a carved statue, on the other side of the table.

He jerked his head in her direction.

"Can't we go somewhere, so I can talk to you?" he asked, turning his cold eyes to Sylvia. The look in them told her that he hadn't come here to take her home with him.

With a dreadful sinking of her heart she opened the door that led into Aunt Agony's parlor, and he followed her in and sat down near the window.

He Asks Divorce.

He jerked his head back defiantly and told her what he had come for.

"I want you to divorce me," he said shortly.

She gave a little gulp.

"Divorce?" she repeated the word slowly, as if she had never heard it before, and couldn't imagine what it meant. "Divorce? You want a divorce?"

Ranny nodded. "I said so," he answered, with that smile of his, and took out a cigaret.

She tried to think of something to say to him, but all she could see was Babe Delano standing in his arms, under the living room lamp last night.

"You want to marry Babe?" she said to him, and his silence was all the answer she needed to that question. She knew that he did.

He sat waiting for her decision, smoky now and then flicking his ash off onto the floor of Aunt Agony's spotless room.

From sheer force of habit, Sylvia found herself brushing them up into the palm of her hand, and carrying them to the fire place.

Babe wouldn't do things like that for him, she said dully to herself. Babe wouldn't lay out his clean clothes every morning, and spread his bathmat on the floor beside the tub. Babe wouldn't darn his socks, and steam his ties and press his trousers. Babe wouldn't forgive him when he came back to her from the love affairs that he was always having.

Sylvia knew that no woman in the world but herself loved Ranny as she loved him. No woman would take scars of him as she did. No woman would give up everything worth while for him, as she had. No woman but herself knew how to love him. He belonged, not to Babe Delano, but to her. No matter what he did, he would always belong to her.

"No" she said, looking straight into his eyes, "no, I won't divorce you." Her tone was as calm as a summer sea at sunrise. "There's no use in asking me to, because I won't."

She could see that she had staggered him. He gave a start, and looked at her as if he doubted what he had heard.

He was gone then, shutting the door behind him so softly that all the family portraits shook and trembled against the old-fashioned wall paper of the room.

At 4 o'clock that afternoon she was wakened by Aunt Agony, who was shaking her gently.

"Get up, Sylvia," she was saying. "There's a woman downstairs to see you."

"All right, aunt, I'll go down," she decided suddenly and went into the bathroom to splash water into her tear-streaked face. Not for worlds would she let Babe know that she had been crying.

Why should she cry, anyway? Ranny had love affairs before and would probably have them again, but he would always come back to her, when they palled on him, as he always had. The thing to do was not to let him break her heart in the meantime.

With her head high and her lips firm, Sylvia went down the stairs to see what it was that Babe wanted.

Costs Only 3 Cents to Remove Wrinkles

Better than massage for removing wrinkles and age lines, far less expensive and bothersome, is a simple Tarkroot mixture which any woman can prepare and apply in a jiffy. Almost immediately after spreading this over the face there is a pleasant, soothing sensation and the mirror shows the horrid age lines and "sags" disappearing like magic. In less than 15 minutes the face is smooth and firm as a schoolgirl's. Seems almost too good to be true, but the actual experience quickly removes all doubt.

All one need do is to procure an original package of Tarkroot from the druggist, mix a spoonful with a spoonful of lemon juice and apply with the fingers. This, of course, is perfectly harmless. It is easily washed off, leaving the face wonderfully refreshed and rejuvenated, with a healthy glow. And the cost of such application is less than three cents!

Who Is Love's Favorite?

Can You Solve the Problem?

DRAWN BY NELL BRINKLEY

© 1928 by Int'l. Feature Service, Inc.

WHO is Love's favorite? Who is a magnet to his pink loveliness? Who is a candle for his gilt wings that carry 'im 'round and 'round in a gentle circle to go away? The girls would like to know. At least one girl would, for she wrote in to ask. To ask ME How I should know is a puzzle all my own.

Perhaps she thought Dan Cupid sits at the desk next to mine and I could just lean over between telephone jangles and ask him I wish I did know him! There's a lot I'd like to ask him—for myself and the rest of the Eves with the questions of the Sphinx herself on their minds

The girl of the gold and lavender paper, with so much delicate lining tissue in it that I couldn't unmuffle the letter from it scarcely, wanted to know if Lova didn't—by Love she meant any and all of the world that has to do, or ever had to do, with loving—like the girls of other times the best, for the sake, mostly, of their lovely hair.

THIS is the girl the poets sang of—did not be like her better than the new, the latest girl of the racked short locks?

This is the girl our "gram'pas" linger in memory over, painting her on the soft curtain of the past, wooing her over again. Didn't Love love her better than this girl with thy mascarared eyes, the purple cheeks, the red wet mouth, like a pool of fresh paint, and the Pan—haircut?

Honestly, I don't know. I do know that in the days of other lovely women with more and prettier hair, their grandparents and their just-parents found fault with those dominus mistress, too—and that Cupid loved them just the SAME!

Maybe his heart is like butter over this one, too All skins seem to point to that way!—NELL BRINKLEY.

The Temptress

-:- -:- -:-

By Ibanez

"The Temptress" is to be filmed by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a special Cosmopolitan production.

SEBASTIANA looked at the girl with a gleam of amusement.

"So you're a little bit jealous, child! No need to think about that! We're all the same when we're in love with a man

"You must know, pretty one, that there are plenty of them running after her . . . but don Ricardo is none of those!"

The notorious Manos Duras lived on an estate of the mess from which he could see the distant limits of Argentina on the far horizon.

His ranch-house, of adobe, was surrounded by other huts, or hovels, and a few corrals fenced in by old stockades, but only on rare occasions was any cattle to be found in them.

Everyone in the county knew where the ranch of Manos Duras was located; but very few ever cared to visit it, for the region had a bad taste.

Manos Duras was away. Possibly he was disputing, in Chile, of the cattle he had "rustled" in the Argentine.

Sometimes the Manos Duras ranch contained an extraordinary diversity of inhabitants. Wandering gauchos like himself took up their quarters in the adobe huts for weeks at a time without anyone ever discovering for a certainty where they came from or where they were going.

The comisario of La Presa got little rest for not a night went by that he did not fear that some depredation might occur.

One day Manos Duras sprang on his horse to go up to La Presa to make some purchases. To shorten the way, he was accustomed to ride through the outlying part of the Rosas ranch stretched between his land and the settlement beyond.

Don Rojas was also at that hour riding about his property, looking it over and making calculations for the future. Suddenly he saw a rider approaching him.

He could scarcely contain himself when he saw who it was.

The gaucho, as he drew near, raised his hand to his sombrero, in greeting, then spurred his horse ahead.

After a moment of hesitation don Carlos also started off at top speed, cut across the gaucho's path and rubbed him.

"Who gave you permission to come on my property?" he shouted.

"Then I'll show you everyone rides through here," the man answered.

"Everyone but you," was the aggressive reply. "If ever I find you again on my land, you'll get one of those bullets!"

This reply put an end to the gaucho's assumed meekness. He looked contemptuously at Rojas, and said with slow distinctness:

"You are an old man, that's why you talk to me like that."

Don Carlos took his revolver from his belt and pointed it at the gaucho's breast.

"And you are nothing but a cattle thief . . . Why they should all be afraid of you is more than I can understand. But if ever again you steal one of my steers, old man he I am, I'll make you pay for it!"

As the rancher was still pointing his revolver at the gaucho's face, the expression of his face allowed no doubt whatever concerning his determination to carry out his threats, the gaucho did not dare move a hand toward his belt. The slightest motion on his part might call forth a shot . . . So he contented himself with giving don Carlos a venomous glance, and slunk away very low.

"We'll meet again, boss, and we'll have more time to talk."

With this he dug his spurs into his horse and set off at a gallop, without looking back, while don Carlos remained holding his revolver in his right hand.

Near the river, however, the gaucho had a more agreeable encounter. He noticed three riders coming towards him, and stopped to see who they might be.

The marquesa had felt impelled to accept an invitation to go once more to the works to see the progress of the dam With her were Canfera and Moreno

All three stopped their attempts at conversation to look intently at Manos Duras, who was waiting motionless at the side of the road. Moreno knew who he was and murmured his name to Elena, who was interest in the gaucho was so keen that she yielded to her impuse to speak to him.

"So you are the famous Manos Duras of whom we have heard so often!"

The horseman seemed a little disturbed by Elena's words, and more so by her smile He took off his sombrero with a reverential gesture.

"I am that unhappy man, senora, and the present moment is the happiest in my life."

He replied with pleasure at the courtly homage she was receiving

Canfera, who thought the conversation ridiculous, hastened his impatience by protesting that they ought to be getting on, But Elena did not choose to hear him, and with smiling interest, continued her conversation with the gaucho.

"They tell dreadful stories about you. Are they true? How many murders have you really committed?"

"Black calumnies, senora" Manos Duras replied, looking straight into her eyes. "But, if there are any murders I can commit for you, you have only to ask!"

Elena seemed thoroughly pleased by this reply, and said with a look at Canfera:

"How gallant the man is in his way! You can't do it as much as that, as these are plain at their best!"

Finally she gave him on, bidding farewell to the gaucho with a courtesy

CORRECT MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) When serving at a dinner, what is the right time to serve peanuts?

(2) When walking with a lady which side should the boy be on?

W.

HAVE individual nut-dishes placed before every place, and have these filled with the nuts. Then your guests nibble them as they wish throughout the dinner.

(2) The boy walks on the side of the pavement nearest the curb.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

(1) When making a sight call may one keep on a coat, if he removes one's hat as well as one's gloves, and sit in the salon without wearing either? I have been asked without hat or coat, but it seems to me that more hats were worn than not.

(2) Is the enclosed sheet of paper quite proper for the writing of business correspondence?

MRS. P. B. N.

IT is far better form and better taste for a lady to wear her hat in the salon of the host. And, if it is not too warm, it is better for her to wear her coat also.

(2) Yes. And for business notes, too, it is most convenient to have paper of this kind printed with your name and address on the top of the sheet and one the flap of the envelope For this you should use your title (Mrs) and have your name and address printed without abbreviations.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Is it proper for a girl to write a short note of thanks to a young man with whom she is not corresponding, upon receiving a card of greeting from him?

J. S.

YES.

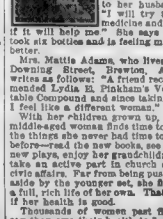
WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Annie Kwinski of 526 1st Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., writes:



"I suffered so much from that she became so weak and run down that she was not able to do her housework. She saw the name Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the paper and said to her husband, "I will try that medicine and see if it will help me." She saw she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

Mrs. Mattie Adams, who lives in Downing Street, Brewton, Ala., writes as follows: "A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and since taking it I feel like a different woman."

With her children grown up, the middle-aged woman finds time to do the things she never had time to do before—read the new books, see the new plays, enjoy her grandchildren, take an active part in church and civic affairs. Far from being pushed aside by the younger set, she finds a full, rich life of her own. That is, if her health is good.

Thousands of women past fifty, say they owe their health to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, if it will help me." She says she took six bottles and is feeling much better.

MEDBURY SAYS...

By John P. Medbury

THERE are several ways to recognize the different seasons, but it's a safe sign of spring when the first start hauling manure trains to the crossing.

AN automobile owner has to spend two weeks putting a coat of paint on his car, but it only takes the Twentieth Century Limited a minute and a half to knock it off.

ONE guy always closed the window of his sedan when he got near a railroad track. He said he didn't want the trains coming inside his car.

HIS engine stalled on a crossing the other day and he didn't know how to get his machine off the tracks. A couple of seconds later a locomotive came along and solved his problem.

THEN train knocked his automobile so far that the finance company had him arrested for taking the car out of the State.

HE found a hub cap in Ohio and is thinking of [illegible]

AND a friend of his picked up the steering wheel in Indiana.

HE had to advertise in a Missouri paper to get his stop-light back.

IT was a through sleeper on the B. & O. that hit him, and it knocked him unconscious. He said it was the first time that he'd ever gotten any rest out of a Pullman car.

HE wouldn't have tried to beat the train across the tracks, only the salesman who sold him the automobile told him that it would do eighty miles per hour.

WHEN he got to the crossing he realized that the salesman had only been mistaken by thirty-five miles.

HE claimed the locomotive was going around a corner and the engineer didn't put his hand out.

HE couldn't hear the whistle because his wife was in the back seat talking.

HE man he honked his horn for the right of way but the engineer wouldn't pay any attention to it.

DAILY SHORT STORY

WANDERING FEET

By Mabel McKee

BLUR of the sky that came down through the opened skylight of the hospital room, muffling of voices in the room, even to the young doctor's rather sharp one and the old doctor's soft, comforting one that healed pain even as did his potions, and then the soft, sweet, sticky odor of more chloroform as the nurse let it trickle onto the sponge—all these clouded Helen Moody's senses, made keen by the acute pain until that minute.

She caught at the old doctor's hand. Here eyes closing and closing, though she fought that inclination, saw the old doctor's face going farther and farther into the darkness and her ears seemed to hear above that whirring noise, "You mustn't have bitterness in your heart. It's so close to the little heart you're carrying that it will make it bitter, too. And you wouldn't want that."

Then she was in the land of dreams and remembering the big handsome boy who had won her heart and married her, though all her family protested. "He's a wanderer, a rover," they had said. "He says a million [illegible] before he's himself an explorer, he'll be off to the North Pole or jungles of Africa again in a few months. He will, his will!"

She had been sure her love could hold him, but he had gone despite her pleading and the old doctor's warning that he would be a father before he could return.

Memory of all the bitterness in her heart, during that time, came back to Helen in that dream, though it didn't hurt now. It just made her sorry—sorry because she had not understood the boy's desire to find new regions, to find out new things about the old ones and tell them to the world.

She had told the old doctor then that she wanted her baby a girl. "I don't want another wanderer to go out of my heart and break it again," she had dared at him. "I won't have it. I won't! My baby has to be a girl."

Now she laughed at the memory of that. Of course her baby would be a girl. Things always happened as you wanted them in a dreamland as beautiful as this up in the tree tops, where myriads of birds sang, where baby clouds floated in your face and cooled your brows.

Yes, she was sure her baby would be a girl.

Then she was seeing the boy as he had left her. Swinging along to the ship which held his guns, his trunks of supplies, his compasses, his stacks of paper on which he would write the data for his lectures and books. He had always said he was going to write home some day when he had time from his wandering.

How tall and brown and handsome he was! What a brave smile he had! What glorious eyes when they were eager like they had been then! How tenderly they had looked at her!

For now she understood him.

But as she smiled at him, among those beautiful trees, the boy seemed to grow smaller and smaller. He was a youth, just twelve—a youth, with sullen eyes and straying feet, always brought back from the alluring paths for which they longed, by a mother, who whined and said that he was a derelict, that he didn't care for his home and her. Her whining made his face hard—cude—

Helen's hands went in front of her eyes. Poor, little boy—so misunderstood! She would comfort him.

But when she looked again he had grown still younger—was about eight and standing in front of a store window, looking lovingly at skates. The same woman was shaking her head and saying: "No, no." He could not go. She told him that he must come in the house and play with puzzles and games as other children did.

Shrinking again was he—a little five-year-old chap, slipping through an opening in the fence to the corner where he could see the circus parade. Following the long line of animals. His little hands touched timidly the sleeve of one of the drivers of the camels.

He was lifted to the shoulder of the trainer and then onto the back of one of the great bears. How beautiful his little mouth curved then as he laughed. His little hands clapped merrily. He waived at the Arabs coming on top of a coach and called to the hyenas in a cage. Oh this was the life!

And then he was sobbing as if his little heart was breaking. For a scolding woman was shaking him and dragging him home.

Poor little chap! His day of adventure had been spoiled. Helen sobbed for him in her merciful sleep. While she seemed to wipe away her tears, the little chap fluttered away and a fancy toddled out of the tree tops toward her—happy and laughing and shouting with life. His eyes were reckless, his little hands reached out to the unknown world. Unafraid, unrepressed, he was the most beautiful baby she had ever seen.

"Oh, that was Rob," she cried, "My boy! Before they pecked him in."

The boy had never told her of any of these things, but in the few months they had been together, Helen had learned that he had never loved his home. She had wondered then. Now she understood.

The trees were blurring and going farther and farther away. The fragrance of the honeysuckle, the jasmine—oh, they were drifting too. The drowsiness was coming back again. She had heard voices in the distance—the old doctor saying, "She's coming out of it fine. Let me be where she can see me. I've known her so long. She won't be afraid of me."

A hair-covered snout, a [illegible] in black garments, her mother—all their faces blurred before Helen. But it was to the old doctor's hand she clung as she floated out of the fragrance and back into that soft sticky smell of ether.

"Why, I'm in the hospital again," she said slowly and the words came with an effort. "I'm here."

Then she tried to sit up. She was remembering. "Where is my baby?" she almost sobbed. "Where is my little girl?"

The old doctor shook his head as the women in the room. Helen's mother started crying then, and something about her would have been such a comfort and the nurse was trying to hush her. But the old doctor lifted a baby from a bed her in the room and carried it to Helen.

"Here is your little son," he said. Helen looked at the little fellow looked at his little hands, at his eyes—at his hair. Exactly like the joyous baby she had just left—was he. She looked at him and then her hand closed over the two little hands. "Little lad," she said softly and smiling, "when your feet go wandering, I'll wander along, for mother understands wandering feet.

FOXY GRANDPA'S INTERESTING BEDTIME STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

BOBBY, Bunny and I had spent the day aboard a British man-of-war, for we were visiting in England at the time. And as we left the gangway and stepped into the launch which was to take us ashore, Bobby said:

"Foxy Grandpa, you ought to see the torpedo."

Several days after that we went down to the seashore and spent a very happy week swimming and sailing and exploring the beaches and coves along the coast.

One day I was lying on the sand and Bobby was busy building a castle the sand when Bunny, who had been frisking around the beach, returned suddenly and before he reached us shouted:

"Come on, Bobby, come on, Foxy Grandpa, I'll show you that torpedo I was telling about."

Now Bobby looked at me as if he thought Bunny had lost his mind, and then looked out to sea, turned to me and said:

"I don't see a ship in sight and there certainly isn't any arsenal on this beach." He hesitated a moment and said:

"I have it. I'll bet the British fleet has been having manoeuvres around here and they've lost a torpedo and it's washed up on shore."

Bunny must have overheard Bobby because he shouted back over his shoulder:

"It's washed up on shore all right. That's where we're lucky, but this torpedo was never on a British ship, I'll wager my left hind foot."

Bunny bounded on ahead and we followed him.

Then he stopped and we could see he was standing looking at something lying on the beach. We hurried and caught up to him, and there it was. It was big and flat and it must have measured about six feet from its flat snub nose to the tip of it's tail, and without a doubt, it's body was five feet wide.

"Skate," I declared.

"Belongs to the Ray or Skate family," declared Bunny in his most professor-like tone, "but this particular fellow is a torpedo."

"Torpedo" exclaimed Bobby.

"Electric torpedo," explained Bunny.

"Yes, sir," announced Bunny; and I could see that he was ready to give one of his lectures. He struck a very dignified pose and continued: "This torpedo is an electric fish. In fact, it has a kind of electric battery inside of it. They say the battery is something like the honeycomb with a number of six-sided columns which run from under the skin of the back to the skin of the lower part of the body, and that each of these columns is divided into a number of cells. Now, these cells each contains a liquid and it is in this liquid that the electricity is stored."

"Could it shock anybody?" asked Bobby.

"Reds known to ring an electric bell," answered the four-footed professor, "and it could easily kill a duck. Just in case any of you are getting a shock myself, I think I'll duck right now." And off he frisked up the beach.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By Helen Rowland

What every man, either consciously or sub-consciously, is looking for in a non-interfering wife.

You know the kind I mean! A wife whose chatter won't interfere with his reading of the newspaper at breakfast, and whose love of an argument won't interfere with his digestion at dinner.

Whose religious principles won't interfere with his Sunday golf—and whose suspicion won't interfere with his Saturday night poker-game.

Man is a peace-loving animal and what he wants is a wife whose social ambitions and dancing dates won't interfere with his evening's rest—and whose nightly questionnaire won't interfere with his sleep.

The kind whose boiler-plate housekeeping won't interfere with his comfort or his right to put his feet on the chairs—and whose espionage won't interfere with his little amusements.

A wife whose sense of humor won't upset his amour propre—and whose Scotch conscience won't interfere with his good times.

A woman whose scruples won't put a blight on his little bachelor habits—and whose prejudices won't frighten off all his bachelor friends.

Whose sensitiveness won't interfere with his expressing his honest opinion of her—and whose vanity won't interfere with his admiration of other women or his monopoly of the bath-room mirror.

All he asks of a woman is that she love him a little, trust him a lot—and LET HIM ALONE! But that, my hearties, is asking for a miracle!

Now that both sides have been heard in the Marine cocktail case, the public can draw its own conclusions.

Consider these facts:

1. General Smedley Butler went to the hospital right after the cocktail party.

2. Physicians testified that Colonel Alexander Williams was also sick.

Doesn't that indicate that both of them were drinking?

It is one of the drawbacks of prohibition that a gue't always feels hostile toward his host the morning after.

• • •

It must be said to the credit of Colonel Williams that he was the first to recover.

FOR Acid Stomach

PHILLIPS' Milk of Magnesia

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

BETTER THAN SODA

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from gas. Besides, it neutralizes acid fermentations in the bowels and gently urges this sourin waste from the system without purging. It is far more pleasant to take than soda.

TRY A 25c BOTTLE

Insist upon "Phillips." Twenty-five cent and fifty cent bottles, any druggists.

GLOOMY TRADE TALK IS MUCH OVERDONE

By FRANK H. MELOON,

Gloomy trade talk has been much overdone. Announcement that Boston department stores had a record good quarter up to March this year was but one of many significant straws showing that the pessimists occasionally need curbing. The 28 per cent. March gain over the like month last year for the first 57 Class A railroads reporting might also be cited. The gain was in net operating income.

BEAUTIFUL IS MARRIAGE

Bachelorhood is lonesome; spinsterhood is dreary.

A man ALONE is not a complete human being; a woman ALONE is not a complete human being. A man and a woman combined IN HOLY MATRIMONY make up the complete human being. And HOLY matrimony is exactly the right word.

He who lives alone lives HALF a life, and so does SHE who lives by herself.

Whether you work for a living or dawdle away your time spending money that others have made, GET MARRIED.

Cut out and learn by heart, and show to your young man or your young woman, discreetly, the following beautiful lines by Herrick, who lived in the time of Shakespeare. TAKE HIS ADVICE.

Gather ye rosebuds while ye may,
Old Time is still a-flying:
And this same flower that smiles today,
Tomorrow will be dying.

The glorious Lamp of Heaven, the Sun,
The higher he's a-getting
The sooner will his race be run,
And nearer he's to setting.

That age is best which is the first,
When youth and blood are warmer,
But being spent, the worse, and worst
Times, still succeed the former.

Then be not coy, but use your time;
And while ye may go marry:
For having lost but once your prime,
You may for ever tarry.

Times, men and women have changed since the day, long ago, when Herrick wrote poems in his youth and delivered clever sermons when he became a clergyman.

People do not marry as young as they did, and that is a good thing for them and the children. The children are better if the marriage is well thought out and the marriage is happier. Take your time; think carefully about the most important act of your life.

But, young people, MARRY, and marry while you are young; that is to say, while you are under thirty-five.

Plato, with one exception the wisest of the Greeks, said that the father should be fifty years old and the mother about thirty-five. That may do for the very WISEST.

But for the average human being it is better to marry as soon as possible AFTER YOU REALLY FALL IN LOVE and are mentally and physically full grown.

The marriage age depends on PHYSICAL HEALTH and mental maturity.

The mother gives to her children EVERYTHING—the health of the body, the strength of the mind, the purity of the soul. She is the great GIVER to the children.

With the father, intelligence is even more important than physical strength. And KINDNESS is the most important thing in marriage. You need not necessarily marry a screen star or a champion athlete in order to get a good husband that will make you happy.

But whatever you do, GET MARRIED.

We are shutting out immigration from the United States. We need more good Americans, MILLIONS OF THEM. Contribute your share of babies—at least four.

Young gentleman, young lady, find the right mate, then marry him or her. Find happiness in mutual love, devotion and faithfulness.

And you will find in old age a reward for your work and your life in the gratitude and affection of your children.

The barren fig tree was cursed; you read it in the Bible: it bore no figs.

Marry, have children—if Providence sends them to you. If not, marry and be happy together, anyhow.

Unmarried, you are only one-half of a human being; you live only HALF of a life.

LAW OF RHYTHM ON EVERY HAND

By DR. FRANK CRANE

In a very interesting chapter Herbert Spencer speaks of rhythm. He tells of standing by the seashore and noting the vibration of the masts to and fro as they are swayed by wind and wave. Also the bending of the rushes beneath the wind, and the ripple of the waves on the shore.

He goes on from that to say that all motion is rhythmic. Rhythm is found to be the law that pervades all things. The flow of blood through the body is not continuous, but rhythmic. It goes in pulse beats. The air is taken into the lungs in successive breaths. It is not an unbroken passage of air through them. The peristaltic motion of the bowels is rhythmic.

Looking about us we see that almost all forces are rhythmic in their nature essentially. Electricity is rhythmic, consisting in the successive pulsations which are so minute as to give the appearance of a constant stream. Light moves in waves, as also does sound. There seems to be no such thing as an unbroken stream of any kind of force in nature. When the wind during a storm beats against the window pane, it comes in gusts. The law of rhythm seems to pervade all the universe.

It is the same in the spiritual world. Our life is wholly rhythmic. It is characteristic of everyone that he has his ups and downs. There are times when hope is high and the pulse is quick, and there are times when we are in depression. This should help us in two ways. It should keep us humble when things are coming our way, and give us hope when things seem to be against us. There is a proverb that the darkest hour is just before the dawn.

No man is justified in giving up because of untoward circumstances. If we will but wait the tide will turn. Who knows but that success lies just around the corner?

The fluctuations of the stock market are an example of rhythm. The prosperity of every country does not flow in an uninterrupted stream, but goes by alternations.

This law of alternation has to be taken into account in every department of life. So true is it that dramatists make use of the contrast and precede the satisfactory denouement by the low pressure to peril or danger.

'You Said It, Marceline!'

ON "MAGIC MOON"

A SLENDER NEW MOON
Gracefully gliding along
The Milky Way, MAY BE
ROMANTIC, but a
NEW MAN ON ONE'S HORIZON may be Positively THRILLING!
OF COURSE, the chances
ARE he is NO different
From the OTHERS, but it
Ha does SHOW PROMISE OF BETTER THINGS
Than the LAST MAN,
THE LEAST a girl can do
Is to TAKE HIM out
In the MOONLIGHT and
LET HIM STRUT
HIS STUFF. It seems
SOME girls have great
CONFIDENCE in the MOON
LIGHT, and SOME men
Have great NERVE, but Though LOVE STARTS SMALL,
Like a crescent moon,
Sometimes by the time
The moon is FULL the Affair is beginning
To WANE, and Sometimes NOT.
A DAY past cannot be REPEATED, but the same MOON
CAN enchant us AGAIN
AND AGAIN, and so,
SOMETIMES, can ONE MAN.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DEAR Every Father and Mother:

We have talked together, you and I, about the food your child should have, the books he should read, the plays he should see and the love and discipline he should receive. You have not always agreed with what I have said, but I hope that, somehow, through that talk I have made you feel the deep and loving concern I share with you for that child.

May I seem on that understanding now as I speak to you of another experience which I have never seen touched upon in any daily paper yet which some day may press harder on you and on him than anything on earth?

I want to speak to you about the death that will some day come to that child.

You shrink from the thought. You almost hate me for mentioning it. Yet some day the memory of these words may be a hand to lift you across the hard place.

Some day your child will die. You think you can imagine what that death will mean to you if you are living. Some times for fleeting, shuddering instances you have visioned it. You have thought of the agony you would feel, and the devastating loneliness. You're sure you can see the whole terrible picture, but, unless you have lost a child, you can't.

For, if that sadness comes to you, its deepest bitterness will not be what you now expect. You will not be counting your own pain and loneliness. You will only be thinking of your darling's pain and loneliness and confusion. And you will be wishing with all the strength of your mangled spirit that you had prepared your child better for that far journey.

Do Not Doubt

It may be that you doubt this. You may be quite positive that you do not believe in a future life, and that if your child goes you will have no such concern, but will simply give yourself up to your sorrow.

You THINK you don't believe in a future life, my friend. But take it from me, if your child goes, the only thing you will want to believe in will be that future life—the only thing that will hold your interest will be that future life. Then you will turn with fury on anyone who insinuates that there isn't a future life or who suggests that God will not be good to that little spirit, stumbling down the black trail alone.

That is how death will leap on you, Pal. And if your own unpreparedness brings you to such a pass, what will it mean to that child whose peace and happiness are dearer to you than your own? If, as we hope, that child steps from its own worn body into another land, with the personality that it had upon this earth, it will carry with it all the hope and doubts, all the wisdom and ignorance which that personality held upon this earth.

If in its life there came no thought of or familiarity with that land, how strange and lonely it will seem when he awakes and finds himself without you.

I am not saying this to frighten you. I am only trying to make you foresee his need for his own dear sake. And I'm asking you to anticipate that need by talking to him sometimes about death, and by your quiet, healthy speculation trying to rob it of any of its terrors.

A New Vision

I do not mean that you should talk to him of death in a religious way. I do not think that death has a peculiarly religious significance. I think it was meant that we should regard it simply as we now regard a journey to Europe or China. And I'm sure that, if we would so regard it, a great amount of our suffering would be removed.

It is in that sense that I am asking you to talk to your child, while you can still talk to him. It will not be hard to make him think about these things in a happy way. Remember, your child's fresh mind holds no horror, unless you put it there. He has no doubt, unless you give it to him. He comes into the world believing in miracles, and only your own skepticism kills that belief. Naturally, he is eager and hopeful about all things, and gilds all subjects with beauty until life tarnishes his power. And if death should lead him from your side, and set his feet upon that lonely trail, that eagerness and faith will make his going bright, if you have not spoiled that for him.

So, though your own mind be darkened and indifferent, my friend, do not let your darkness or indifference blight the prospect for your child.

BEGIN TO LIGHT THE CANDLES FOR HIM NOW, SO IF THE NIGHT COMES IT MAY NOT BE SO DARK!

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

He is very blind that cannot see the sun.

A bone to the dog is not charity. Charity is the bone shared with the dog when you are just as hungry as the dog.

* * *

The long succession of the generations of mankind should be regarded as a single man, ever living and ever learning.

The sum of wisdom is that the time is never lost that is devoted to work.

For the People's Security

A New Safeguard.

Policemen and firemen are charged with the stern and solemn responsibility of insuring the public tranquillity and providing for the common defense of the municipality or the State whose sworn officers they are.

When one of these sentinels of the people's security lays down his life at the post of duty, the least that the people whom he dies to defend against attack by violence or loss by fire can do is to see to it that his widow and his children shall neither be left helpless nor made public objects of haphazard charity.

To the end that policemen and firemen serving anywhere within the Commonwealth of Massachusetts may be safeguarded from any such anxiety, a bill has been introduced in both houses of the Massachusetts Legislature which this newspaper is proud to sponsor, and in support of which it calls upon the great family of its readers to give their endorsement.

This bill will soon come up for consideration unless the Joint Committee on Rules refuses the authority necessary to insure its consideration. It was drafted and filed by Representative Bernard P. Casey, Democrat, of Boston, and Representative John Thomas, Republican, of Gloucester.

Under the terms of the bill the City of Boston and other cities and towns of the Commonwealth are authorized to pay the widows and children of policemen and firemen killed in the performance of their duty an annuity that shall not exceed the salary of the deceased.

This annuity would be paid to the widow so long as she lives and remains unmarried.

In the event of her death the annuity would go to a guardian for the benefit of any child or children surviving up to the age of sixteen.

Three men on Beacon Hill will determine the fate of this meritorious measure: Governor Fuller, President Walls, of the Senate, and Speaker Hull, of the House.

Of all the bills pending which deal with crime prevention, or with the improvement of the administration of criminal justice in Massachusetts, this newspaper believes that there is not one among them which will do more to give pause to the individual or group of individuals tempted to disturb the public tranquillity or defy the common defense than the bill now awaiting action by the Rules Committee on Beacon Hill.

Let this bill become the law of Massachusetts and you will fortify the spirit of all policemen and firemen in the hour of danger. You will hearten them to risk life itself in defense of their trust, certain that their dependents will not become objects of charity.

OUTDOOR SPORTS WHILE THE WIFE WAITS DINNER

Outdoor sports soon will claim the leisure time of many men.

Dinner will be delayed, engagements forgotten.

In the past have you given the little wife a square deal when it comes to interfering with your enjoyment of sports?

She wants dinner at the time it will best suit her husband and prepares it to be served at that time.

It takes planning, perhaps sacrifice, on her part to be punctual.

A dinner, in fact any meal, is not improved by waiting.

Do you blame her for being displeased if, after her effort in warm weather, you will not deny yourself those extra few minutes which might mean a successful meal instead of a dried-up excuse for a meal?

Perhaps your wife desires to ride with friends after dinner.

If you are late she is upset and does not enjoy it.

It is mighty selfish of you to ignore her comfort and plans.

The little wife is an equal partner in your firm, isn't she?

You would not treat your business partner as you treat your wife, in this matter of letting your outdoor sport rule your course of action all Summer.
